A CARD. Some two months since. I gave notice to those indebted to me, and to the public, that I had dissolved all my relationship with them, as a merchant, and asked them kindly to call and settle their accounts and pay their notes. Very few among the hundreds thus indebted have seen fit to do so. I would now say, in all sincerity and kindness, that while I feel under very many obligations for past favors, to the public, and to many of very set I posed the rest for the second to many of you, yet I need the pay for the property you have had, and I will devote two or three weeks exclusively to bettle with those who will call at my office in the rear of Messra Chase's Law Office over my store now occupied by Mr. Haw-ley.
