Whig Convention in Vermont.

We applaud the sentiment contained in the following resolutions of the Vermont Whig State Convention:

"A greater restriction of the Executive power and patronage of the United States, which now, from its vast and yet increasing extent, bids fair to overshadow every other branch of the Government, to the great detriment of the general welfare, and with manifest danger to the liberties of the people.

"An administration of the finances of the Government (both of the State and of the United States) which shall be strictly limited by law, and economical in its character."

The convention says well, "that a party which maintains such principles in a free country, never dies," unless, it might be added, freedom should expire with them.

We are well satisfied that the Executive has grown at the expense of the co-ordinate Departments of the Legislative and the Judiciary. It is also fast overshadowing the dignity of the States themselves.

Of the power of the Federal Executive over the Congress we need offer no higher proof than the number of members who have sought and accepted office at the hands of the President, and the open use that is made of Executive influence in strengthening the representative by bestowing office upon his constituents.

The same influence has been shown in the translation of the highest State functionaries to Federal Offices, and by the swarm of persons who, passing by the employments public and private offered at home, besiege the Executive with their claims, and what must be even more annoying to him, their flatteries.

MIGRATION.—Wisconsin is absorbing the great body of the migration to such an extent that Michigan finds herself neglected, and the papers of that State are discussing means for diverting the stream of settlers to their own vacant lands. According to the Detroit Free Press, much of the popularity of Wisconsin with emigrants is to be ascribed to the judicious laws passed by the Legislature of that State to encourage emigration thither.—The Detroit Free Press says that 200 Norwegians passed through Buffalo from Quebec a few days ago, on their way to Wisconsin.

"I DIGEST!" such is the true meaning of the word "Pepsin," or of the two Greek words from which it is derived. This is the significant and appropriate title of the true Digestive fluid or Gastric Juice, prepared by Dr. J. S. Houghton of Philadelphia, from the fourth stomach of the Ox, for the cure of Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It is nature's own remedy for an unhealthy stomach. No art of man can equal its curative powers. It renders Good Eating perfectly consistent with health. See the figure of the ox in another part of this paper.
