

The Nebraska Struggle.

NEBRASKA IN THE HOUSE.

In the House, Thursday, of last week, Mr. Richardson offered a resolution terminating the debate on the Nebraska Kansas bill on Friday at 12 o'clock, and moved the previous question. After some debate a motion was made to lay the resolution on the table, which was negatived amid much confusion. Efforts to procure a call of the House, requests to be excused from voting, motions to lay on the table, &c., occupied the House for many subsequent hours.

At four o'clock, Mr. T. Speaker was followed by Mr. Orr of South Carolina. Soon afterwards, a vote of yeas and nays being taken, on a motion to adjourn, developed the fact that there was no quorum present, the majority of the members having slipped off to dinner. A call of the House was ordered, and consumed much time in hearing excuses, &c. Near seven o'clock the Speaker returned from dinner, and took the chair. Ridiculous suggestions, motions to adjourn, votes by yeas and nays on trifling motions, debates on points of order, &c., then continued to consume time through the rest of the night. All these proceedings were characterized by great confusion and noise, members stretching themselves out on chairs and benches to sleep, eating their meals in the lobbies, talking and laughing.

Saturday, May 13.—In Congress, yesterday, the Senate adjourned, and the House adjourned until Monday next. In the House of Representatives the disorderly session commenced on Thursday, was continued all night without adjournment, and all day. At three o'clock yesterday morning, Mr. Richardson made an effort to satisfy the opposition by a new proposal to continue the debate on the Nebraska bill until Thursday next and to postpone until one week the special order on the bill, which is "no go" however. The offer of the opposition having been previously rejected by the majority, they were now evidently determined to agree to nothing. The disorderly proceedings continued. After day-light baskets of breakfast were brought into the House for various members. A call of the House was then ordered, which consumed much time. At noon the usual daily hour of meeting having arrived, Mr. Dean raised the point that the debate should be read. The Chairman was present to make the usual prayer, but the Speaker overruled it, as there had been no adjournment, and this was the continuation of the legislative day commenced on Thursday. Subsequently a vain effort was made to go into committee on the private calendar. At half past four o'clock, P. M., on a motion to adjourn, the yeas were 65, and the nays 63; a vote so close as to cause some discussion. In the course of the afternoon several abortive attempts to effect an arrangement for the continuance of the debate were made by the friends of the bill.

At half past eleven o'clock, Mr. Richardson announced that the Nebraskaists yielded, and moved an adjournment. Intense excitement immediately ensued. Mr. Hunt of Louisiana, appealed earnestly for an adjournment until Monday, to give time for reflection and pacification. Mr. Callahan of Tennessee, eloquently advocated the proposition. Mr. Richardson expressed most conciliatory sentiments. Mr. Stephens of Georgia, said Mr. Hunt could give no guarantee for the good faith of the action opposed to business, and went on to denounce with severity the New York call for a meeting. Mr. Giddings said, with vehemence, that if stump-speaking was to go on, he would take a hand in it, and his remarks added greatly to the excitement. Mr. Seward of Georgia, moved an adjournment until Monday, to which Mr. Campbell of Ohio, protested with great excitement of manner, and said that he would resist it to the bitter end. Mr. Edmondson of Virginia then advanced upon Mr. Campbell, attempting to throw off his coat, and fiercely declared that he would have the fight now. Mr. Campbell stood prepared for the conflict. Loud cries of "Order! Order!" arose from all parts of the House. Gov. Allen, Col. Rietz, Mr. Dean, and many more interfered, and some seized Edmondson and some Campbell. The Sergeant-at-Arms rushed forward with his mace, with a hundred voices exclaiming "Order!" "Fight out of doors," &c. Edmondson was withdrawn by his friends. Judge Douglas was in the midst of the fray. At length after the restoration of comparative calm, the adjournment was carried with wild shouts, stamping and rapping of desks. Mr. Edmondson had previously a very serious difficulty with Mr. Wentworth, who was forced to retire from the hall.

Special Dispatch to The N. Y. Tribune. WASHINGTON, Saturday, 2-12 P. M. House in Session. Our friends of all sections in good spirits. No brawling—all working well. No battle fought better than the usual working. A few reckless Nebraskaists roomed and violated all rules and immediate vote on main question. Speaker believed to be incorruptible.

Special Dispatch to The N. Y. Tribune. WASHINGTON, May 12, 1854—3 P. M. The House, after an irritated session of about two hours, finally adjourned at about 2 o'clock. The Nebraskaists are sorely discomfited. The opponents of the bill are unshrinking and confident.

Drugs in the House directed his followers, and with the exception of a few hours, was there during all the struggle. They charged him with counseling revolution and violence in order to accomplish his purpose. It is charged that he attempted to tamper with the Speaker, and to get him to override the rule, but the Speaker repelled his suggestions. Then it is charged that he tried to get up a plan to override the speaker's decision, which plan failed. There is no doubt that Douglas was cognizant of it. This contest has shown the true man. The New York Whigs were all true as steel. Marice, Peck, Oliver, and John Wheeler have reflected imperishable glory on the Halls of New York. Lewis D. Campbell of Ohio, is of all men the man deserving most credit for his vigilant and determined course in resisting the Nebraska outrage.

Philosophical.

The French soldiers, though active and spirited, are probably smaller in stature, on an average, than those of any other civilized nation. The small size of the present race of Frenchmen is a natural consequence of the practice in France, during the wars of Napoleon, in selecting conscripts for the army. The largest and finest youths were always chosen for the ranks; and when we remember that these conscriptions followed each other, in quick succession, for many years, till some provinces were almost depopulated of young men, only the puny and feeble being left, the cause of the subsequent deterioration of the people is evident.

Here is presented to view one of the evil consequences of war, perhaps not generally thought of. If the members of our race are less noble, physically, than in the days of old, "for there were giants in those days," who can say but the wars in which mankind have been almost continually engaged, may have been a chief cause of their degeneracy? We only throw out the suggestion. If the Peace Society can make any capital out of it, they are welcome. And if it should induce the Czar and the Sultan, Queen Victoria and Louis Napoleon to patch up a peace, posterity—European posterity—would owe us a debt they could never repay.

New Music.

We are happy to state, for the benefit of the lovers of the science in this section, that J. Lyons & Son are the "duly appointed" agents of Horace Waters, of New York, for the sale of his musical publications, and will hereafter receive from him, weekly, all the new pieces issued from his establishment. The following pieces have been laid on our table for consideration:

SANTA CLARA POLKA. Just difficult enough, we should judge, to call for a little practice from the somewhat experienced, and not too difficult for an attempt at its performance by the less skillful. Composed and arranged for the Piano-forte by C. S. Petricolas.

A WORLD OF LOVE AT HOME. This piece would be excellent for a young lady, to sing to an old bachelor friend rapidly approaching the shady side of forty, or to a wayward brother in the habit of spending his evenings away from the domestic hearth, and always delaying his return till the "small hours." The sentiment of the song, if not the sprightliness of its movement, would at once commend itself to the "inner man," and perhaps have a happy effect. Composed and arranged by Charlie C. Converse.

THIS SONG WAS "WRITTEN FOR LITTLE CORDIEA Howard in her original character of the gentle Eva in Uncle Tom's Cabin," by her father, George C. Howard. Song by a sweet young voice, we imagine its effect would be charming. And soon try.

New wine in an old bottle. This song will probably have a "run" equal to the old one. Composed and arranged as solo and chorus by J. R. Thomas.

Before the adjournment of the Legislature, unanimous votes of thanks were tendered to Speaker McCaslin of the Senate, and to the Clerks of both Houses—but Speaker Chase had eleven votes recorded against him; whereupon the Harrisburg Democratic Union, after remarking that the demonstrations in the House were not decidedly favorable to Mr. Chase, adds, "We are persuaded that those gentlemen who manifested a want of confidence in him by their votes, did so in the discharge of what they believed to be their duty." Popular man, to have the party organs in the State hit him in that style!

The annual eclipse of the sun, on the 26th inst., will commence, not far from four o'clock in the afternoon, and continue about two hours. The error of some of the papers that stated it would commence in the forenoon, originated, it is said, in the practice of modern astronomers of writing "A. M." instead of "P. M." as an abbreviation for "afternoon," for as "A. M." is the usual abbreviation for forenoon, the "M." was supposed to have been accidentally omitted, and hence the error.

PERMANENT. Miss C. M. Stratton, of Harrisburg, is to be the bearer of parting testimonials from persons on whose judgment we can safely rely, of her capacity and success as a teacher of penmanship; she now gives, in the 9th section of the new School Academy, and also private lessons at the residence of A. L. Webster, in this borough.

But, a kind of ballad, or battle-axe, formerly used by the English infantry. We shall send bills to some of our subscribers, in the Register, before long.

New Publications.

The Pennsylvania School Journal.—Thomas H. Burrows, the editor of the School Journal, is doing much for the cause of general education in this State. His periodical circulates quite generally, we believe, among teachers; and has infused new life and energy into their efforts for improving themselves and their schools. If the new school law shall prove as beneficial as its friends anticipate, a large share of credit is due to Mr. Burrows for his zeal in awakening public attention to the necessity of improving our mode of public education. The Journal will be peculiarly useful to Teachers and School Directors, at this time, to enable them to comprehend and conform to the modifications of the school system. Published at Lancaster, Pa., at one dollar a year.

The Pennsylvania Farm Journal has grown to be one of the largest and best Agricultural periodicals in the country. Its articles are mostly of a practical character, and treat of almost every thing connected with the cultivation of the earth. The farmers of Pennsylvania should give it a generous support. Published by J. M. Meredith & Co., West Chester, Pa., at one dollar a year.

The Easton Conspiracy Case.

The trial of the parties charged with a conspiracy to extort money from an old man named Benjamin Green, which has been progressing at Easton, Pa., for several weeks, was concluded on Wednesday evening by a verdict. To give our readers a clear idea of the case, we append an extract from the charge of Judge McCarty, delivered on Wednesday:
