

The Sun

MONROSE, PA. Thursday Morning, June 8, 1854.

WHIG STATE TICKET

Governor, JAMES POLLOCK, of Northumberland. Canal Commissioner, GEORGE DARSIE, of Allegheny. Judge of Supreme Court, DANIEL M. RAYSER, of Montgomery.

WOOD Wanted on subscription at this office, immediately.

V. B. PALMER, the American Newspaper Agent is the only authorized agent for this paper in the cities of Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

THE HOUR HAS ARRIVED.

Those who watched the recent Eclipse, observed that the obscuring darkness, covering at first but a minute point, gradually spread till it darkened a great part of the sun's face, when, having reached its greatest limit, it began gradually to diminish, and at last passed off entirely, leaving the sun to shine with undiminished brightness. As that dark shadow stole over the orb of day, so is the dark shadow of slavery stealing over the continent of America. Small, very small at first, 'no bigger than a man's hand,' it has spread far and farther, till now who can say, where its limit shall be? Shall it go on without a check, till not one gleam of the sunlight of freedom is left? Shall the eclipse be total, and 'one dark shadow cover all?' Free men of the North! these are questions that you must answer; and the time to answer has come. You must decide whether the never-ebbing tide of Southern despotism shall be stayed in its course and rolled back from off this which was meant by God and our fathers for the land of the free. If you fail in this emergency, if you do not meet the crisis in the spirit of brave men, who can dare all things for the right, but rather like the traitors you sent to Congress, bow down meekly under a great wrong, then the hope of the world is gone, and freedom shall live but in the songs of poets and the dreams of visionaries. But the people of the North will not prove thus recreant to themselves and their posterity, to their race and their God. They feel that the hour for a final stand against slavery has at last come. The feeling is deep, heartfelt, and universal. It is confined to no party, no age, no sex. It has been gaining strength and intensity ever since the traitor, Douglas, proposed in the national councils to destroy the landmarks of freedom; and when that act of perfidy was consummated, its mighty hold on the hearts of men was seen in the breaking down of all party distinctions, and a union of Northern freemen for the great work they have to do. It was this spirit that so aroused the people of Massachusetts—and, indeed, of the whole North—when they heard of the arrest of the fugitive, Burns, in Boston. It fired the hearts of New England's sons, as they have not before been fired since the days of the Revolution; and when at last, an unjust and tyrannical law had decreed to slavery its victim, it was heard in the deep toll of a thousand bells from a thousand hills of the land of the Puritans—seen in the draped and humbled Eagle-banner, flapping mournfully in the wind—felt in the indignant breast of every true American. And this feeling will not die away; the South will not let it.—They are too greedy for unlimited power and extended dominion, and trust too much in the cowardice they attribute to the people of the North, to delay the execution of their schemes on account of any exhibition of indignation here. The consequence is, that the people of the North must unite in self-defence. The instinct of self-preservation must unite them on this question, pre-eminently greater, as it is, than all that divide them.

REPEAL THE REPEAL!

Since the infamous outrage of reappointing the Missouri Compromise has been consummated by the National Administration, and its supplies tools in Congress, in violation of long pledged faith and regardless of the earnest remonstrances of the mass of the people, almost everywhere that a spontaneous expression of popular sentiment has been made, is it not high time for every friend of right and justice to rally, not only to the defence of our country against the alarming strides of wrong and aggression, but by every proper and lawful means, to counteract and defeat the object of this base and treacherous conspiracy? A crisis has indeed arrived when 'forbearance has ceased to be a virtue.' Our National Government, in which its immortal founders recognized the 'inalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and only tolerated Slavery as a temporarily existing evil, with a view to its ultimate eradication, (to which end every energetic barrier was raised against its further extension)—this Government, I repeat, which from its original patriotic design, was afterwards swayed into a concession of a part of her territorial acquisitions to the existence of Slavery, on the express condition or compromise that all the rest should be forever dedicated to Freedom—which was again drilled into still further concessions to Slavery in the acquisition of premeditated conquest with its enormous cost of blood and treasure—has by this crowning act of infamy been plunged into the act of grasping even all the remaining territory pledged to Freedom, for the spread of that curse whose exclusion was a part of the bond under which the possession of the first was obtained! Thus has our government been degraded by one act of aggression after another, step by step, from its original design—the promotion and extension of liberty and its attendant blessings to man, to the very opposite in the promotion and extension of slavery! For to what other object has the present administration with its pliant tools in Congress devoted its entire energies, but legislating for Slavery in our remaining territory, and plotting schemes for grasping more for the same purposes?—Have not the Homestead bill, granting land for the landless, and the Pacific railroad project, with every other great and beneficent object for promoting and extending the interests of agriculture and the facilities for commerce been thrust aside for this base purpose? And by what means has this act of perfidy been accomplished? Had the people of any part of this Union ever asked for the repeal of a compromise hitherto held sacred by all parties for a quarter of a Century past? Was ever a single representative elected to Congress for such a purpose? No. Instead of any delegated power from the people—instead of their wishes having ever been consulted, this measure has been sprung upon them by surprise, and hurried through by the force of executive power and patronage, before they could have the chance to interpose any objection excepting by their supplicating remonstrances, which have been set at naught in a most contemptuous manner! And all this mainly by a party claiming to be patriotic and the Democracy!

THE STRIDES OF SLAVERY.

The New York Daily Times, in a very able article says that the rights, interests and public sentiments of the Free States have been treacherously betrayed by some of their Representatives. And it is so; executive bribery and party discipline have accomplished their object. Whether this gigantic stride of the slave-holding interest towards that supreme domination over the destinies of this continent at which it aims, will arouse a spirit of active resistance among the people of the Free States, or whether it will be tamely submitted to, as have all previous aggressions from the same quarter, the future only can determine.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

Cassius M. Clay has recently written a letter to the New York Tribune, from which we extract the following: 'What then shall be done? In the first place, punish the traitors, as an example for all future times. I honestly believe that every man of the free states, who voted for the repeal of the Missouri restriction deserves death! But there is no legal way of inflicting the penalty, the halter they must escape. But one thing can be done—break them on the wheel of public opinion.—Let no man deal with them as business-men banish them from the social circle, and disfranchise them practically forever! This seems hard, but the race of traitors must die before we can live.' 2. Let the elections, even for the most inferior offices, turn upon the repeal of the Nebraska bill, or its amendment, so that the people of the territory shall have the unequalled right to vote slavery out. To do this, the free trader must give up his free trade, the tariff man, his tariff—manufacturers, shipping, internal improvement, temperance, schools, all must, for the present, be held in abeyance to the one great question, Shall America be free or slave? 3. Although I think the free Democracy are the best placed to achieve the end, we must tolerate and recognize all parties who will aid, as allies. In a Congressional District where the free Democrats have a supposed larger force, let the Whigs and Democrats renominate the Free Democratic ticket. And where the Whigs or Democrats have a supposed larger force, let the Free Democrats renominate the Whig or Democratic ticket, so as to defeat the services of all parties. In the Presidential Nominating Convention, let a Delegate be sent from each Congressional District in the Union, of that party which has the Congressman, and let that party vote a common candidate. Such a candidate, thus nominated, can, in my opinion, be elected triumphantly in 1856. Let that candidate, whether Benton, Seaward, or Hale or any other good citizen, be chosen without regard to his localities in Free or Slave State. For our party is truly national—their sectional.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

How do you then, fellow freemen, let the watchword be, REPEAL! REPEAL! REPEAL the REPEAL! And since our would-be dictators have made this the order of the day and especially since they have made Compromises of no binding effect, however sacred or time honored, let us pay them in their own coin and give them enough of repeal by declaring henceforth an unflinching opposition to that most odious feature of the act imposed upon us in 1850—the Fugitive Slave Law—heretofore merely submitted to, but never cordially acquiesced in by the people. Let us firmly and unflinchingly never let this matter rest till not only this Repeal is repealed, but the law making us slave catchers for the South is served likewise. Let them croak about agitation as they will.—With all their affected horror at agitation against Slavery, they show no scruples about agitating in its favor, by throwing this fire-brand of agitation among us. So now let them have agitation to their hearts' content. Let the Democratic Whigs and the truly Democratic Democrats throughout the North, hereafter stand shoulder to shoulder for the vindication and restoration of rights already bartered away, as well as against all further encroachments of the slavery power in their plotted schemes for more conquest, and let the aristocratic Whigs and the despotic Democrats—including all the 'must' disturb the Union,' croakers, and the 'must' disturb the party' Whigs of both parties, go their own way. Whigs may still be Whigs, and Democrats be Democrats, if they will, in all other matters; but until this vastly paramount object is accomplished, let them act as firmly and unitedly together in this battle for their common rights and interests as do the Southerners in what they claim to be doing; and the thing will be done. Let there be henceforth no more yielding what is clearly right, and no more submission to what is wrong. And if the desperate leaders of the South, in defiance of the warnings of their own true-hearted patriots, persist in their state threats of dividing the Union—why let them! While giving them no just cause for secession, let them take the responsibility of dissolving the Union if they dare! But it may be asked what action beyond a mere wordy agitation is suggested to regain our rights and redress our wrongs. I would say that while steps are already being taken at the East (in accordance with suggestions of the New-York Tribune) by the formation of associations to encourage, aid and facilitate a speedy emigration of freemen into Kansas as well as Nebraska, where resolute and enterprising young men who can be recommended to go in and take immediate possession of the territory before the more sluggish Southerners can get there with their human chattels, in equal numbers, let us be doing what we can, here at home. Let Leagues be formed of independent freemen, pledging themselves henceforth to vote against any and every man, either for Congress or for the Presidency, who is not openly, avowedly, earnestly and unmistakably opposed to all further aggression, and in favor of Repeal; and although this may be without effect upon the present Congress and National Administration, we shall be all ready organized for the next. It is true we have no occasion in this district to rebuke our own immediate Representative, Hon. G. A. Grow, who has stood manfully against the wrong, for which he should be heartily honored and sustained. But to render our action thoroughly effective where we may, I would go still further. Let us pledge ourselves together that we will vote for no man for any office either State or National, whose station, patronage or influence can have the least bearing, either directly or indirectly, to sustain uphold or even countenance the outrage; nor even for any one who will not fully and unequivocally pledge himself (to the proper extent of such station or influence) to oppose and discountenance both the act and its authors and abettors, and aid in its earliest possible repeal; so that the election of no man candidates hereafter can be claimed as even a tacit acquiescence in the measure by the people.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

What say you, fellow freemen, to the suggestion of a meeting to form such a League in Susquehanna county on the 4th of July next? Would there be anything inappropriate in the day or improper in the deed? Would not the deed be rather worthy of the day, and the day of the deed? Though I may say in the language of a still surviving veteran statesman, that—'Solitary and alone I have set this ball in motion!' yet if I am not alone in the sentiments I have expressed, (as I trust I am not), but if on the contrary the motion I make is seconded by those approving it, let it be adopted, and such a League for Freedom may be formed, which if responded to generally at the North, with the energetic and determined perseverance that characterized the veteran statesman alluded to, a corresponding success will be the ultimate result. I will say in conclusion that I shall subscribe my own name at the bottom of this article—not from a mere desire of notoriety, but first to show that I will propose no sort of pledge to others, to which I would shrink from putting my own name; and secondly, for the purpose of assuring all the timid and doubtful who have not the independence to enlist in any movement however laudable in itself, till they know from whom it originates, and who are likely to be its leaders, as also all such as reject every popular movement of which they cannot assume the leadership themselves, that this motion comes from a humble private citizen who aspires to no such distinction as that of a political leader, for himself, and acknowledges no man as his leader in such matters. And I further more assure them, as I trust all who know me will believe, that having prepared this for the press (if the Printers are willing) without the suggestion of any other individual, it is done without the least ulterior design for the special benefit of any man or set of men in the community; but it is simply and entirely the voluntary act of the public's humble servant JAMES W. CHAPMAN. Montrose, May 31, 1854.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

Messrs. Editors.—Will you please say to your readers, if you publish the communication under my name this week, that it was intended at the time of writing it, for last week's Register, though not completed and handed in in time for that paper. Otherwise it might appear like arrogating quite too much to say that 'Solitary and alone I have set this ball in motion,' as I have since seen that similar suggestions are being made in various quarters, of banding together in ceaseless opposition to the outrage, and in a determination to vote down all its advocates and abettors, at the ballot box. It might be said also, that my idea in quoting the expression was mainly that of proposing to hold a meeting to form a League for that purpose in this county was a suggestion of my own, without consultation with others. J. W. C.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

The local election in Washington city resulted in the choice of Mr. Towers, Whig and Know-Nothing candidate as Mayor, by between 300 and 400 majority. The Board and Council are also Whig. The result is considered a decided rebuke to the Administration, which openly exerted its influence for Maury.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

SUSQ. DEPOT, June 1st, 1854. H. H. FAZLER, Esq., Dear Sir: On the arrival of the Wood Train at this Station at 9:12 o'clock this afternoon, as the oilman of the Train was engaged in breaking, he fell from the cars and was instantly killed. One car passing over his body, crushing it in a horrid manner. His name was John Harrington, of this place. Aged about 16 years. Yours truly, R.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must retain possession of the island at all hazards. A report that a party of Americans had landed at a place called Chorrera had created considerable excitement, but proved false.

LETTERS FROM CASSIUS M. CLAY.

By the arrival in New York of the steamer Black Warrior, we have intelligence from Cuba, that the Governor General is raising black troops, and has issued an address, in which he says that Spain must