EDS. REGISTER With your permission I will offer a few re marks upon the above named kind of fowl, hoping thereby to add something to the agricultural interest of our county. The Imperials, of the Marsh stock, which take their title from the name of the importer thereof, is, to us, a new variety of domestic poultry which has been introduced into this country within the last six years. It commands the admiration and favor of all funciers to scare, but he will have too much go ahead and judges of excellent fowl; and they ought, in him for every body, as I should judge from their appearance, to occupy a prominent place in every poultry yard. I have recently obtained a pair of so much the worse. Let no man ride such a "The Imperials" of pure blood, which quite surpass what I had conceived from the description given me of them; and as I am un able to say much of them myself, I subjoin the following extract from an Eastern paper, written by the importer and proprietor, for the benefit of those who may feel an interest in the stock.

"This breed of fowls is ranked by common consent, as one of the very best varieties now bred in New England; and this position is accorded to them on account of size, beauty, and general valuable properties. At maturity, the Imperials exhibit much longer legs than the Shanghais, and are altogether larger, and of darker plumage. The color of the cocks is generally red and brown, and the hens are usually dark yellow. They have large single combs and wattles. They have long swift arm to wield a whip, so as to produce necks and legs, and the legs are usually yel- an impression, although the horse was fat and low, frequently feathered, though some of the best specimens are without feathers, and are dark. The appearance of these birds is attractive and exceedingly majestic. The chickcas feather slowly, but are very strong and healthy, -are the most vigorous chickens, and stand the cold better than those which feather at an earlier age."

"The eggs of these fowls are of a medium heating influence, other things being equal. size, and tinged with a salmon color. There This is a fact not sufficiently known or heed-"The eggs of these fowls are of a medium are no fowls more prolific. The imported cd by those who are compelled to drive horhen, (says Mr. Marsh,) laid 135 eggs in 147 consecutive days, and another laid 86 eggs black one. Again speaking of these fowls, the Committee say ;- The Imperial Chinese fowls contributed by Dr. Bennett were splendid birds. The crower and pullet shown were six and a half months old, and were very large—the cock weighing over eight pounds. I have only to add, I will give all necessary information to any person or persons who may wish to obtain fowls of the same kind.

S. A. Newton. Newtonville, Nov. 1850.

GERALD MASSEY, the poet, was born in the depths of poverty. At the age of eight, he commenced toiling in a silk manufactoryrising at five in the morning and working untill half-past six in the evening. It is a bitter thing the bending of the childish neck to the weary cares and struggles for bread.-Massey says:

I never knew what childhood meant. I had nochildhood. Ever since I remember, I have had the aching fear of want, throbbing heart and brow. The currents of my life were early poisoned, and few, methinks, would pass unscathed through the scenes and circumstances in which I have lived; none, if they were as precocious as I was. The child comes into the world like a new coin with the stamp of God upon it; and in like manner as the Jews, sweat down sovereigns, by hustling them in a rose, take this method to inform our friends and the bag to get gold dust out of them, so is the public that we have just opened an assortment of DRY GOODS AND GROCERIES poor man's child hustled and sweated down in this bag of society to get wealth out of it; and even as the impress of the Queen is effaced by this process, so is the image of God worn from the heart and brow, and day by day, the child recedes devilward. I look back now with wonder, not that so few escape, but that any escape at all, to win a nobler growth for their humanity. So blighting are the influences which surround thousands in early life: to which I can bear such bitter testimony.

How to Judge a Horse. The following rules for judging the character of a horse, are going the rounds of the agricultural journals. It may be useful, therefore, to give them in connection with a few 1. If the color be light spriel or chestnut, his feet, legs and face white, these are marks of It he is broad and full between the eyes, he may be depended on as a horse of good sense and capable of being trained to anything. As respects such horses, the more kindly you treat them the better you will be treated in return. Nor will a horse of this description stand a whip, if well fed. 2. If you want a safe horse, avoid one that is dish-faced; he may be so far gentle as not

3. If you want a fool, but a horse of great bottom, get a horse of deep bay, with not a white hair about, if his face is a little dished horse, who is not an adept in riding—they are tricky and unsafe.

If you want one who will never give out, never buy a large overgrown one; A black horse cannot stand heat, nor a white one cold. 4. If you want a gentle horse, get one with more or less white about him—the more the better. Many suppose that the parti-colored horses belonging to circusses, shows, &c., are selected for their oddity. But the selections thus made are on account of their great docil-ity and gentleness. COMMENTS 1. One of the most tricky animals we ever knew, was a sorrel mare with a white face and feet. Among other stratagems, she would affect lameness on the road, and hold her nose to the water without drink- rose, Pa. ing, to deceive her driver.

(2.) We once owned a light bay horse with white feet and face, whose hide appeared more nearly to resemble that of a phinoceros than anything else. It required a strong and

(4.) Nothing is more true than that a white horse will endure the sun's rays best, and a black one becomes quickly hot under their ses in hot weather. But we question if a white horse suffers any more from the cold than a it most readily. Probably animal heat has less to do with color than solar heat has, yet there is reason why arctic animals, as the polar bear and snow owls are clothed with white.
