Mr. Bonfig was obviously getting a little entangled, and paused, relieved by the idea that he had contrived to convey his meaning.

Luigi still hung his head very low. 'I love her,' he said simply, 'and she loves me; I shall always love her, and she will always love me.'

'Yee, yes, no doubt,' said Ebenezer, trying to smile; that is how lovers talk as a rule. I believe. Well, let us drop the subject for the present, and consider that I have said nothing. The City of Glasgow Bank failed, and Mr. Bonfig, who was one of the princinezer, who detested the thought of pal shareholders, found himself a beggar. Not a beggar in a comparative sense, but a beggar in the fullest and sternest acceptation of the term. He was one of the 'one thousand ruins'

however, to avoid observation—near the door of the Opera House, he noticed a motely group of ill-dressed men shambling in and out of the dark and narrow side entrance. They went in free from turden and came out again loaded with huge placarded boards. Bonfig timidly ventured to question very brief time on the confidential

Youngstown, Ohio, May loth, Ical Du. B. J. KENDALL & CO:—I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt which I praced very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one jointain a small one on the other which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veternary surgeons which failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendals Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express, I determined at once to try it, and got our druggsts here to send for it, they ordered three bottles; I tors them all and thought I would give it a thorbirate in the state of the colt cased to be lame, and indumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle and the colts limbs are as free from lumps and as smooth as any horse in the state. He is estirely cured. The cure was so remarkable this I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles, who are now using it. Kendalı's Spavin Cure ON HUMAN FLESH. s Mills, Wash'ton co., N.Y., Feb.21,'-1
