-An interesting if not creditable story regarding Geribaldi has appeared in an Italian newspaper, and oppasioned more or less comment in Italy. The story exserts that the great general was killed at the battle of Appromonte twenty years ago, and has since been personated by a man whose resemblance to Garibaldi had been widely known and wondered at before that period.

. The rustic moralist does not always take kindly to the ways of his city cousin, but he occasionally gets off a threwd remark at his expense. A short, time ago, a young man from the city, who was dressed in r faultless suit and a pair of shoes which theered to a point in the most modern style, was visiting in a rural district. A bright litthe four-year-old boy looked him all over until his eyes rested on those shoes. He looked at his own chubby feet and then at his visitor, and then looking up, said: "Mister, is your toes all out off but one?"

THE SUNFLOWER..

The Springfield Republican has discovered the practical as well as the æsthetical utility of the sunflower. The blossoms will feed the bees, and its seeds are the most excellent food for poultry in winter on account of the oil they contain, while the leaves are said to make good fodder, if dried in the sun, cut up fine and mixed with bran, for milch cows. In England large quantities of sunflowers are raised solely for the purpose of feeding stock and hens. In Russia the sunflower is extensively cultivated for the oil the seeds contain. The oil is palatable, clear and flavorless, and it is used for adulterating olive oil, being exported from St. Petersburg to the shores of the Mediterranean sea. Next to poppyseed oil, sunflower oil burns the clearest and longest, so that the peasants apply it to household purposes. From the stalks of the plants they also make a good quality of potash, and the residue of the seeds, after the oil is extracted, is made into oil cake for feeding to stock. Sheep, pigs, rabbits and all sorts of poultry will also fatten rapidly upon the oil cake and will eat the seeds with as good a relish as they eat corn. The sunflower will grow CUT THIS OU orb bad air and prevent malarial diseases. it should therefore be planted about pig puble purpose. The seeds should be r twelve inches high earth them up like corn hills, and they will ask no further atention at your hands. Each plant will produce at the lowest estimate 1,000 sceds. The centre flower often produces that mount, and the lateral flowers several hundred. Six pounds of seeds will plant an cre and it can be planted after the crop of early potatoes has been harvested. The oil extracted from the seeds is most excellent for making the nicest kinds of toilet soap and if the stalks are treated like flax they vill produce a silky, fine fibre, which, it is aid, the Chinese use to adulterate their silk nanufactures. They raise large quantities of sunflowers, and with them originated the louble varieties. The stalks can also be used in manufacturing paper. In New

Many wonder how Parkers' Ginger Tonic can perform such varied cures, thinking it ssence of ginger, when in fact it is made from many valuable, mediciness which act eneficially on every diseased organ.

A good story is told of an old-time Philadelphia Quaker, whose sterling integrity was ingeniously commingled with worldly shrewdness. He was an extensive vessel owner, and during his life made a fortune, which has since, in the hands of his heirs, been doubled again and again. At one time, when a long period of stormy weather had greatly delayed shipping of all kinds, he became alarmed for the safety of a ship loaded with a most valuable cargo, and several weeks overdue. Going to an insurance igent he truthfully told him that he feared he vessel had been lost, but if the agent wished to take the risk he had no objections.

NORTHERN AND SOUTHERN. A writer, "A Union Veteran," thus discourses in Our Continent as to which section, the North or the South, produced the better soldiers during the rebellion:-"In the actual soldierly qualities of the people of the two sections there is probably but little difference. All the talk about the impetuosity, reckless daring and joy of battle which is said to characterize the South in contrast with the North is mere twaddle. The charge at Mission Ridge, when the army of Grant outran his orders and went to the summit instead of intrenching at the foot of the slope, was the great miracle of impetuosity of the whole war. On the other hand, the claim of greater stanchness, of stubborn bulldog grip, on the part of the North is equally nonsensical. Petersburg is an eternal monument of the power of the South to stand punishment. The man who could boast of the superior staying power of the North, with the facts of that marvellous defence before him, exceeds in assurance the traditional government mule. The truth would seem to be that in mere soldierly qualities the men of the two sections are very fairly balanced. Each has certain advantages which are counterbalanced by certain deficiencies. The South has a better North has more ingenuity and is better able to supply deficiencies of equipment and the like. The North has more intelligence, but the South has more homogeneity. The Southern soldier can subsist on less and the Northern volunteer will more intelligently husband his resources and secure himself, against disease. In short, we believe that the excellences and defects of a suddenly recruited army drawn from each section for service against a common enemy are so evenly balanced that no unprejudiced observer could find ground on which to base an

notion is correct. Two rival companions were started to make tunnels under the channel. One was headed by Sir Edward Watkin, a sort of conservative member of Parliament. This scheme was a possible one. The other scheme had for chairmen Lord Richard Grosvenor, the Parliamentary whip of the government, and the Liberal CARROL BLOCK Duke of Westminster. This scheme was a useless and quite remarkable one. But it soon became clear that the government did not intend to let Sir Edward Watkin succeed and Lord Richard Grosvenor fail; and as the idea of the other was not workable the administration very naturally declared against channel tunnel at all. Watkin is by no means a fool, and he saw this situation at a glance. He went with propositions to Grosrenor, and has succeeded in amalgamating the two companies. It was his only chance, and it has succeeded to the full of his expections, for the government has suddenly ome to see that the Channel Tunnel can be made and can be defended, notwithstanding all that was said about it before, and is determined to allow it to be made, if the House of Commons will agree. Every year they seemed to know less about how to farm. This is attributable to the fact that they are learning the ways of the whites too rapidly. They begin to understand that as soon as they can grow crops' their rations will be cut off and hence their growing ignorance of agriculture. If they are given a bushel of beans to plant, they will eat nine-tenths of the amount and plant one-tenth, and the one-tenth will be dumped in three or four holes in the ground. Last spring they were furnished with five bushels of onion seeds. They couldn't eat them, and consequently asks his old friends and everybody else planted the entire five bushels on a piece of to follow him to his new location, where ground fifty by one hundred feet. DE. B. J. RENDALL-& Co;—I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt which I prized very lughly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veternary surgeons which failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express, I determined at once to try it, and got our druggists here to send for it, they ordered three Bottles; I tok them all and thought I would giverit a thoround strail, I used it according to directions and the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame, and the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame, and the fourth day that of the cased to be the colt of the colt of lumps have disappeared. I used but one bettle and the have disappeared. I used but one bettle and the colts limbs are as free from lumps and as amooth as any horse in the state. He says tirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining. two bottles, who are now using it.

Patten's Mills, Wash'ton co., N.Y., Feb.21, St. Da. B. J. KRYDALL, Dear Sir:—The particular case on which I used your Kendall's Spavin cure was a malignant anile sprain of sixteen mouths standing. I had tried many things, but in vain Your Spavin Cure put the foot to the ground again, and for the first time since lurt, in a natural position. For a family liminent it evels anything we everused.

Yours truly,
