

PAID TO LOOK. A young man stood silent on Broadway yesterday. He was good looking and neatly dressed. He appeared to be very much absorbed in contemplating some object across the street. He was an admirer of his own person, that when he was hailed by one of the passing through he paid not the least attention to it. A push, a thrust in the ribs, produced, seemingly, no response in his muscular eyes. He turned and patriotically, tearing his eyes neither to the right nor to the left.

At length the fifty of his attitude and gaze attracted the attention of a plasterer who was passing. The plasterer stopped short and followed with a keen eye the young man. A boy, observing the youth and the plasterer staring across the street, joined them. Then came a watchman, then a bank clerk, then a man of letters, then two negroes, and finally a simple crowd of a momentary nature, who collected, all looking in silent admiration at two men in an opposite window, who were engaged, one in evading Indian clubs, one in pulling away at a patent chest-expander. Meanwhile the original gazer had shifted his position. The reporter said:

"How much do you get an hour?" The young man started. "Well, you see," he said, "the art of drawing a crowd is a peculiar one. I get twenty-five cents an hour for the past few days. I haven't received my check yet."

Then he resumed his twenty-five-cent-an-hour interest in the window across the street, and looked around in the consciousness of being prominent in his art.—N. Y. Sun.

A RULE THAT WORKED BOTH WAYS.
The occupant of an office on Congress street was fast asleep one day this week in such a position that any call had to run the gauntlet of a boy in the ante-room, and as he retired into his den beyond he said to the youth:

"Now, young man, look me in the eye."
"Yes, sir."
"And remember what I say."
"Yes, sir."
"If any person calls and asks if I am in you must say you don't know. You will then ask their business. If they say it is a financial matter you must come in, stop a minute and return and say that I am out of town to take baths for my rheumatism."
"Yes, sir."
