The Nation.
Since its consolidation with the New York Evening Post, has increased its facilities in every department, enlarged its staff to twenty-four pages, and added many able writers to its previous list. It is now pronounced by many of its readers to be better than ever before.
Established in 1853, The Nation was a pioneer in this country as a weekly journal of literary and political criticism of the highest order, conducted free from every party or interest of any kind. Despite a protracted suspension during the first few years, it held persistently to its original aim and its financial success was assured. Meanwhile it had become a recognized authority on home and abroad; its editorial management has been unchanged from the first, and its contributors include the ablest and most complete and readable record of current events and opinions in the political and literary world available for the American public.
The form and style of the paper are clean and clear, and the paper is well preserved, bound, and indexed, making it the most complete and readable record of current events and opinions in the political and literary world available for the American public.
Reduced to 50 per Annum.
Specimen copies sent on request. Ad dress the Publisher, 210 Broadway, New York.
