and was about to put the key in the lock of the handcuffs, when Peter said Mr. Cowenhoven you have not got the right key, you will have to get the other key. Another was brought, and the handcuffs were taken off. A large white muslin dress was then put on him reaching down to his feet. A white cap was also placed on his head. He asked to shake hands with all in the cell before his hands were tied, which he did. He shook hands with the jailor and said, "I hope God will bless you and your family, for you have treated me like a father." His hands were then tied by a rope to his sides, and at exactly 23 minutes past 10 o'clock preceded by a clergyman, and walking between the Sheriff and the Jailor, he passed through the main passage of the prison on to the scaffold.

The rope was then adjusted on his neck, and instantly, without speaking a word, the Sheriff with a hatchet cut the rope to which the weights were attached, when they fell; the rope that was around his neck, here slipped over the culprit's ear, and he fell with a groan on the scaffold. A shriek of horror burst from all present. Mr. Hoagland, the Marshall, immediately lifted Peter up, and although he appeared stunned with the shock, yet he stood unaided again under the gallows. He exclaimed when he was placed upon his feet, "The Lord have mercy on me." The Sheriff and Jailor then re-adjusted the rope of death, and the beam-rope being again cut, the weights fell; the prisoner jerked up, and in an instant with one conclusive spasm of agony, he was launched into Eternity. Not more than 5 minutes elapsed from the time he left his cell, before he was in the arms of death. After hanging the usual time, the body was cut down, and placed in a plain, painted common looking coffin, to be delivered to his friends.

General Harrison's Last Letter.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

The following letter, which we copy from the New York Commercial, is touching and characteristic, and will be read with interest. We annex also, the preliminary remarks of the New York editor. The case throughout is one which illustrates the character of the late President in the clearest and most commendable light. He was indeed a good old man, with a heart overflowing with the milk of human kindness. Now that he is gone, a thousand little incidents will be remembered and related, and all calculated to endear him still more to the hearts of the American People. He could not have died at a more opportune moment for his fame.

"On Saturday, a hardy, weather beaten, but very respectable looking seaman presented himself to the Collector, at the Custom House, and inquiring for Mr. Curtis, said, 'General Harrison told me to give this letter into your own hand. He told me to give his kind respects to Mr. Curtis, and said Mr. Curtis was his friend, and would be my friend.' Mr. Curtis opened the letter, and found it to be, from its date, one of the last, if not the very last letter, written by General Harrison. It bears date of the day when his illness commenced. The reader will see, from a perusal of it, that amidst all the cares and troubles of his high position, he was true to the humblest of his old friends. Tucker says the General made him come to the dinner table with the great folks, and when he hesitated, and intimated that he had better go below for his dinner, the General said, 'Tucker, you and I have been shipmates, and a long time together. You are an honest man; come and eat your dinner with me, and come here again to-morrow morning and get your breakfast with me.'

Tucker says the General invited him to stay in Washington, and told him he would take care of him, but his wife and children being in New York, Tucker preferred to return. He says General H. followed him into the grounds on the east side of the White House, and then walked with him arm-in-arm—that the General had no hat on, and when Tucker adverted to his inability to take cold, he waived the remark by saying he was already unwell. Having received the letter from the General, Tucker says he followed him to the door and shook him by the hand, saying, "go to my friend Mr. Curtis, and after you have been to him don't forget to write to me that you and your wife and children are happy again."

Tucker says he had no money to come home by land, but he did not let the General know that, for he knew he would give it to him in a minute, and he did not wish to take money from the good old man who had been so kind to him. And so Tucker went on board the schooner L. L. Sturgis, at Alexandria, and worked his passage home to New York. When he came to the custom house he had not been ashore thirty minutes, and having first heard the sad news of the death of his kind benefactor as he passed up the Old Slip dock, the abundant tears that fell down his hardy cheek testified that his is no ungrateful heart.

We are glad to hear that Mr. Curtis immediately appointed Mr. Tucker an inspector of the customs.

WASHINGTON, 26th March, 1841.
"Dear Sir—The bearer hereof, Mr. Thomas Tucker, a veteran seaman, came with me from Cartagena, as the mate of the brig Montida, in the year 1829. In an association of several weeks I imbibed a high opinion of his character—so much so that (expressing a desire to leave the sea) I invited him to come to North Bend and spend the remainder of his days with me. Subsequent misfortunes prevented his doing so, as he was desirous to bring some money with him to commence farming operations. His bad fortune still continues, having been several times shipwrecked within a few years. He says that himself and family are now in such a situation that the humblest employment would be acceptable to him, and I write this to recommend him to your favorable notice. I am persuaded that no one possesses, in a higher degree, the virtues of fidelity, honesty and indefatigable industry; and, I might add, of indomitable bravery, if that was a quality necessary for the kind of employment he seeks.
"Yours very truly,
"W. H. HARRISON.

EDWARD CURTIS, Esq.
Collector, &c., New York."

MARRIED.

In Centreville, on the 18th inst., by Adam Keller, Esq. Mr. CONRAD HAMMON, of Stroudsburg, to Miss LUCINDA CARTER, of Easton.
