Veto---Number Eight.

The Governor has vetoed the bill making provision to submit the question concerning the conunuance of the Mayor's Court of Lancaster, to the people of the City and County of Lancaster. He considers it a question with the city alone; because forsooth it happens to be located there, forgetful that the burden of its jority was 1617 .-- The Whigs gained two Wards support is sustained in part by the citizens of in the Common Council. the whole county, and that the State Treasury is taxed for the support of a useless office, in its present imporerished condition.

The Governor says he makes no apology for the use of the veto power! We dont ask this of him, but the people will require more than an apology for its frequent abuse .- Daily Tel.

The Death Bed of Gen. Harrison.

A personal friend of the late President, shocked, as every body must be, at an atrocious for want of something else to say, are complainpublication in the Globe newspaper, respecting ing that Judge Banks has not resigned the Jucondescended to notice and reprobate it in the much honor to himself and advantage to the nation, and would not have dared so revolting ever gave greater satisfaction to the people of an outrage on truth and decency.

Communicated for the National Intelligencer. SHOCKING DEPRAVITY OF A PRESS. In the leading editorial article of the Globe of the 15th inst., among many other gross and wicked untruths, is the following shocking falsification of "the death-bed scene" of General

"The scene of his death-bed, however, showed, in the most affecting manner, the state of his feelings in regard to the matter that had engrossed them from the moment he had entered office. From persons who nursed and secret thoughts that oppressed him; and he continually recurred to the distressing scenes he had recently passed through. Sometimes he would say 'My dear madam, I did not direct that your husband should be turned out. I did not know it. I tried to prevent it.' On other occasions, he would say, in broken sentences: 'It is wrong-I won't consent---'tis unjust.'-'These applications, will they never From different and unquestionable sources, we are informed that the malady of his heart, which broke out into expression in his partial delirium, or when his mind was abstracted in a sort of slumber, half awakened by his anguish, constantly manifested itself by uttering some snatches of sentences like those we have quoted."

Now, however much party spirit may be indulged in the official abuse of Gen. Harrison that was published against him living, there can be no excuse of, nor palliation for, such gross Edward Brooks, Detroit, Michigan, in the inventions as these after he is dead. What is here said is not only not true, but not even approximating a truth; and all these sayings imputed to Gen. Harrison are the malicious inventions of the writer for the Globe.

The Globe is again guilty of a gross untruth Bela Badger, Philadelphia, Naval Officer, in in saying that as to removals from office, Gen. Harrison's Cabinet differed in opinion from the President by a vote of four for removals, and two against, and that this majority voted down the President. This is all sheer invention, for it was not only impossible to remove executive officers without the President's consent but Gen. Harrison presided over and directed every Cabinet meeting. The first removal made, which settled the principle of action was that of the Collector of New York, in which Preshis Cabinet.

It would doubtless be a very pleasant thing for the present Executive to fill the office at once, but although J. Instead of those political labors, which some persons seem to think must necessarily occupy the time of a candidate for Governor, the visitor of Judge Banks will find him engaged with his law books, busy in writing out charges, and in short, assiduously discharging the responsible duties which devolve upon him. And this man we are told, should resign, and turn politician! It has become the order of the day for every candidate, to be questioned on every subject, by every person who may take a fancy that way Our present Governor, during the last gubernatorial campaign, made no reply to such interrogatories, leaving his political course, (such as it was) to speak for itself. Without however, referring to Porter, we may say in regard to Judge Banks, that the position which he occupies, will effectually prevent him from entering the field, with that kind of canvassing for votes, which may be inferred from a general political correspondence. His public life, is before the people, -on no occasion has he been afraid to open his mouth and let his sentiments be known. The people in the East, the West, and the middle portion of the State know him, the people urday next. The motion was agreed to. have nominated him, and the people will elect him. - Reading Journal.

AFTERNOON SESSION

The act pending which the House adjourned this morning, was taken up and finally passed. Mr. Hinchman moved that the House take up the consideration of bill, passed Senate, in their order which was agreed to.

The resolutions relative to the repeal of the Sub-Treasury Law, instructing our Senators to vote for its repeal, passed 44 to 34.

An extract from the Journal of the Senate was presented by its Clerk, stating that Messrs. Spackman and Kingsbury had been appointed a Committee to take measures in reference to the oration of Hon. Thomas Williams on the death of Gen. Harrison, and Messrs. Brodhead of N. and Law were appointed a Corresponding Committee on the part of the House.

For the rest of the afternoon, several omnibusses were drawn up, fully freighted and driven over to the Senate.

The Governor sent in a veto message, returning the act, in which provision concerning the Mayor's Court of Lancaster was made, to place its continuance before the voters of the city and county of Lancaster.

The consideration of the message was postponed for the present, and the House adjourned.
