The St. Louis Tragedy.

The mystery of the St. Louis tragedy, says the Newark Daily, is fully revealed by the Republican of the 1st inst .-- Ed. H. Ennis, a negro barber, to whom the four murderers (all colored men) told the whole story, having disclosed the horrid tale as confided to him: and THE subscriber respectfully informs the citivarious circumstances confirm it. The negroes all escaped the day after; one (Madison,) it is believed, to New Orleans; Brown in a steamer for Cincinnati; Seward or Sewell, formerly of Stroudsburg House, where he intends carrying New York, for do.; and Warrick, a barber, branches went up the Missouri river for the Rocky Mountains. Officers were promptly despatched in all the directions named, and it is reasonable to presume that they will be apprehended. Ennis, the informer, is kept in custody. We add the particulars of the shocking affair.

The circumstances of this shocking affair, as detailed by Ennis, are as follows: About 10 the Easton prices. o'clock on the fatal Saturday night, Ennis went from the barber shop to his boarding house, kept by Leah, a free yellow woman, and Peter Charleville, a free man. Shortly after he had gone sures the public that his endeavors to render gento bed, a negro slave named Madison, came to the door and was admitted. Soon after being admitted, Madison exclaimed, --- "G---d d---n the luck," and on an inquiry why, he stated, "I have done more murder to night than I ever did before and have not been paid for it;" and after Stroudsburg, May 5, 1841. remarking that there would be an alarm of fire shortly, he stated in substance, that he and three yellow men, viz: James Seward, alias Sewell, Warrick and Brown, had gone that night to Mr. Pettus' counting room; that the door was unlocked; Madison entered alone; Mr. Baker was sitting down with his boots off, reading a newspaper. Madison walked up and presented a bank bill to him, and asked him if it was good, and as Baker turned to look at the bill he struck him over the head with a short bar of iron which Writing, he had concealed under his arm; the others then came in and they repeated the blows until he was quite dead, his skull and one side of his head completely mashed: after searching the body for the keys, they rolled it up in the bed | Composition, clothes and placed it in the bed. They secured the door and went to work on the vault to open it. While at this work, Mr. Weaver came to the door and knocked, and called to Jesse, (Mr. Baker) to let him in. Some dispute ensued between Brown and Madison, which should kill Weaver; and it was insisted that Madison should as he had killed Baker, but he refused, saying that he had done his share and would do no more. Brown opened the door, and placed himself behind it, and tees are now prepared to receive any number of as Weaver passed into the room, struck him young ladies that may apply, from all parts of the over the head with a bar of iron; on the second blow he fell, and attempting to rise, Brown thrust a sharp iron bar through his head. From the statement, it would seem that all of them had beaten Weaver.

After some further effort at the vault, finding they could not get into it, Madison left; Warrick, Sewell, and Brown remained a short time, then fired the house in five different places, came out, locked the door, and went up the alley north from the house, and threw the key away. Brown took with him a gold watch and a blue cloth cloak, which he said he had thrown away for fear of detection, but did not say where.

Ennis, on the morning following, was in company with all of them, and many of the facts he got from others besides Madison. Warrick and Sewell said but little about it. Madison had with him on the morning following, the bar of iron with which the deed was executed, and Ennis having learned the office it had performed, took it and threw it into a privy in the rear of Leah's house. The vault was yesterday LARS. The subscriber respectfully invites the searched and the bar found.
