

Mass Tyler Meeting in New York--fun.

The Tyler Meeting at the Tabernacle last evening was rather a funny affair, considering that it was held in a Church. A Mr. Amos Palmer, a Loco Foco now first made famous, was called to the Chair, with a goodly string of office-seekers' brothers and Custom House expectants for Vice Presidents and Secretaries. Messrs. Edward Sanford and James H. Raymond read the Address and Resolutions. When we looked in a little past 8, we judged that there were 1,000 Whigs, as many Loco Focos, and several nominal Tyler men present--perhaps 200. Hon. Caleb Cushing was on his legs. He spoke well, but not with much apparent effect. The Whigs hurrahed for Clay and the Locos for Van Buren, which was all wrong, no such performance being specified in the bills of the evening. But Mr. C. rather provoked them to it. In insisting that neither Whigs nor Loco Focos had any ground of principle to stand upon in condemning Tylerism, he committed a very common but grave mistake--just as a man who has taken too much toddy, fancies the world is whirling round twice a minute, and not his own poor noddle. Col. Zabriskie, of New Jersey, afterwards enlightened the audience with a speech. We know nothing of what it was about, remarking only that he neglected to designate the precise office for which he was working--though every one understood his general aim. He made a very happy allusion to the "Farmer of Ashland," which called down the whole house in a roar of applause, it was received with deafening cheers--hearty and long continued. The audience apparently thought it would not be easy for the Colonel to make a better hit--so they persuaded him to wind off his oration. The resolutions were at once put and declared carried, and the meeting in great haste was pronounced adjourned.--Tribune.

The doors were opened at 7 o'clock, and an immense throng rushed into the church! A band of music entertained the audience, or tried to, until the time of organizing the meeting. Forty-four! Vice Presidents, and ten! Secretaries were appointed.

Edward Sanford attempted to read an address to the people of the United States.

"Fellow-citizens," said he, "if you will give your patient attention, I will present to your minds such an address as--"

(The remainder of this sentence was lost in a burst of applause, mingled with hisses, shouts, groans, catcalls, cries of "Kelly--Kelly! Is he here?" "Where is he?" In the midst of the "squall" Major Hopkins advanced to the front and said, "Gentlemen, Mr. Kelly will be here by the time the address is read." The noise still continued, and Mr. Sanford appeared to be saying something to the audience, but whether it was part of his speech or a portion of the address it was impossible for us to say.)

During this scene loud cheers were moved and given, respectively, for Jackson, Clay, Cushing, Tyler, Wise, &c. &c. Order being again restored Mr. Sanford was permitted to read the address, and was followed by Jas. H. Raymond, with a series of resolutions.

The resolutions recommend a Democratic National Convention in May, 1844, of delegates chosen in the Congressional districts, whose votes shall be cast individually; and they also nominate John Tyler for re-election subject to the decision of a convention organized in the manner, and held at the time designated.

After the resolutions, Mr. Raymond and Mr. Kelly tried to speak; but the babel would not hold its thousand tongues. Mr. Caleb Cushing was therefore brought forward to see what he could do; and the audience did become a little less noisy. They took great liberties with his speech however; and made many very saucy and impertinent, or rather too pertinent comments. We quote a part of Mr. C.'s speech.

I turn to you democrats, and I ask of you what cause of quarrel have you? (A Voice--"The Sub-Treasury." Another Voice--"John Tyler carries out the principles of the immortal Jackson." Laughter and great confusion.) Gentlemen, what is the real secret of this controversy. [A Voice--"The spoils." Another--"Two dollars a day, and roast beef." Laughter and confusion.] I once more appeal to your own heads and consciences, and ask you if the true secret of it all is not the Clay-Benton coalition against the administration? [Cheers, hisses and confusion--a cry of "three cheers for Clay," which was obeyed with most enthusiastic effect, apparently by a great number of the audience.] Is not that the secret of it? Gentlemen, we have been told!--[Another bench was here broken down in the gallery, and a scene of great confusion ensued.] There is really no assignable cause of quarrel. [Cry of "Cut it short!"--"You told us that before," and great confusion.]

Mr. Cushing soon "cut it short;" twenty orators jumped up to take his place; and one musical genius began to sing

"Old mother Bungo,

which was received like Col. Zabriskie's speech at the Court House, with "great laughter and enthusiastic applause."

Then followed cries of "Walsh, Walsh," from the Spartans and others, and after some delay Mike Walsh stepped forward and said he had not come to the meeting to address it and should not.

Mr. Palmer, the President, stepped forward and asked the audience if they would consent to hear Col. Zabriskie for a few moments, or did they desire any one else.

Then followed a cry of "Who's Zabriskie?" "Who ever heard of him?" "Where is he?" "Where's he from?" "Who is he, ha; let's know, will you?" with "Walsh, Walsh; let's have Walsh or nobody. The President then stepped forward, and addressing Mike, said, "Will you speak now or wait till after Zabriskie?"

Mike Walsh--No, sir, no; I shan't speak after Mr. Zabriskie.

Col. Zabriskie--Do you wish to speak, sir? Mike Walsh--When I wish to speak I will not ask your permission, or that of any other man like you, ["Bravo, Mike; go it; that's the how, old boy."]

Col. Zabriskie--What do you mean, sir? [brushing his whiskers, and looking very savage.]

Mike Walsh--[Giving his beaver a knowing pull over his eyes, and returning with interest the threatening look of the Colonel]--Sir, I did not come to bandy words with the like of you on this platform.

The Chairman here interposed and said "Mike, you must speak, they'll take no denial."

Mike Walsh--[Pulling off his hat and facing the audience]--I didn't come here to speak, and I wish you to take no for my answer.

He then stepped back amid cheers, and all sorts of noises from the audience, and continued cries of "Walsh, Walsh." The President again requested Mike to address the meeting, which he refused, and said, "do you suppose me to sustain a meeting got up as this was, when my name was not even inserted in your programme." [Cries of "that's right, Mike, stick it into 'em strong and hearty."]

After some additional confusion, a round or two in the gallery, and a few benches being smashed.

Col. Zabriskie rose and proceeded as follows: Fellow citizens--The principles of John Tyler--["bah"] United States Bank, ["shah"] to discuss ["turn him out"] did not insult myself. ["What's the speaker's name."--I am a democrat, always was, and ever shall contend for, but all that are called democrats are not of the right stamp. ["no, if you're a specimen they ain't," cheers and hisses and another fight in the gallery.] The bank--the battle field--John Tyler--fellow citizens--[hisses, cheers, "what office do you want, old Jersey," great laughter]--Democracy is the largest liberty to the largest number.

Walsh--No it aint--it's the largest liberty to the whole. ["That's right, Mike, you understand them first principles--them's our sentiments."]

Zabriskie--Fellow citizens, the federalists were always alike in all their principles, but the democrats were like the chameleon, continually changing to suit the circumstances of the day. ["No they ain't, you lie if you say so," "put him out," hisses in abundance.] Fellow citizens, let me explain. I mean--

["get out" laughter and hisses.] In 1815 the democracy went for a bank; in 1836 they went against it--["No," "Yes"]--but democracy is the same now as it was--["O yes." A laugh.]

Walsh--In 1815 democracy was in its infancy--now it is in its manhood, you blunder-head--["Yes Mike, so is all of us"--laughter.]

Zabriskie--Tyler--Bank principles--myself--me--["You, what do you want?"--"Where do you want to go to?"--laughter and hisses.] Fellow citizens, the Whig party proper--

["What do you call the Whig party proper--there's nothing proper about 'em"--laughter, cheers and groans.] That party are opposed to John Tyler--["My eyes what a diskivery"--great laughter.] I mean the Clay part of the Whig party--["Worse and worse, who didn't know that?"] Fellow citizens, a juxtaposition--["What's that?"--a laugh.] I hold in my hands the resolutions of some Jersey Clay Whigs--["Who cares for them--Jersey's not in the United States."]

Here the Colonel read the first of the resolutions lately adopted by the Whigs of the legislature.

He was told to stop, and nine cheers were demanded for HENRY CLAY! Then burst forth tremendous and heart felt cheers from every quarter of the Church--The applause was long and loud.

"Fellow-citizens, if you will listen for a moment, I will conclude. [Cries of "Stop, stop"--"Hold up"--"You've said enough--no body understands a word if they do hear it."--Hisses, groans, and all sorts of noises.]

Some fellow in the gallery cried out, "Music, music; give us something to keep us awake."--[Laughter.]

Fellow citizens, as there does not appear to be any music in my voice to suit you, I will conclude, and let some one else come forward. ["That's right"--"go it"--"we've got enough"--"let him out"--"boots, boots"--"music, music." Hisses and laughter.]

The President here immediately stepped forward and said--"Gentlemen, it is moved and seconded that this meeting do now adjourn sine die," which was put and carried without a dissenting voice."

The band then struck up a tune and some one cried--"three cheers for the Subterraneans," which were given and the crowd gradually left the building, which was vacated before 10 o'clock.

WORMS! WORMS!!

If parents knew the value and efficacy of Dr. Leidy's Patent Vegetable Worm Tea, they never would be without it in their families, as children are subject at all times to Worms.

Dr. Leidy's Worm Tea is composed of vegetables altogether, and may be given to children of all ages. Directions accompany each paper or package.

Children suffer much, of times, from so many things being given them for worms, without any effect. Much medicine, given to children, has a tendency to destroy their general health, and they are more or less delicate ever after.

To avoid the necessity of giving medicine unnecessarily when you are certain your children have worms give them at first Dr. Leidy's Worm Tea. It is all that is necessary.

Reference might be made to several hundred parents in Philadelphia city and county, of the efficacy of Dr. Leidy's Worm Tea. Try it and you will be convinced.

Price 12 1-2 cents a small, and 25 cents a large package. Prepared only, and for sale wholesale and retail, at Dr. Leidy's Health Emporium, No. 191 North Second street, below Vine, (sign of the Golden Eagle and Serpents,) Philadelphia.

LADIES' COMPANION!

A STANDARD NATIONAL MAGAZINE, Published Monthly in the City of New-York, by WILLIAM W. SNOWDEN.

NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS IN EACH NUMBER.

The exalted reputation of this popular magazine has been so long and so widely established that it may perhaps be deemed by some supererogatory on the part of the proprietor to offer a direct exposition of its merits and its claims. The Ladies' Companion needs no laudatory puff to force it into a precarious existence; it has, for a number of years, spoken for itself, and in a voice which has found a most satisfactory response in the literary taste of the age. Conforming, however, to custom, which seems to demand a few words occasionally from the proprietor to his patrons and the public, we will simply and succinctly enumerate the chief titles which this standard national magazine has to the enormous patronage which it has for so many years enjoyed, and in that regular and unintermittent advance in the favor of the critical, the literary and the refined, which has ever, in a degree peculiar to itself, characterized the progress of the work.

On the minor merits of the Ladies' Companion,--the mechanical execution, paper, typography, etc., it is needless to dwell. It has ever been the object of the proprietor to place his magazine, even in these points, beyond competition; but in doing so, he has had no disposition to sacrifice the more important and substantial qualities which ought to distinguish a national and standard periodical. It is its preeminence in the literary department, upon which is based the principal claims of the Ladies' Companion. To its pages the proprietor boldly refers for proof of the assertion that by none of its numerous rivals and imitators, has the Companion ever been equalled or even approached in its Literary Character.

If further proof were needed, the proprietor would point with emotions of pleasure and pride, to the following list of distinguished names, embracing the principal regular contributors, whose able pens have exerted so much influence through the pages of this magazine upon the literary taste of the day.

PROMINENT CONTRIBUTORS.

Emma C Embury, author of "Pictures of Early Life," the "Blind Girl," etc.; Lydia H Sigourney; Frances S Osgood; Mrs. Seba Smith; Mrs. E. P. Ellet, author of "Character of Schiller," etc.; Ann S Stephens; Hannah F Gould; Mrs. E. R. Steele; Mrs. A. M. F. Annan, late Miss Buchanan; Miss A. D. Woodbridge; Mrs. Emeline S Smith; F. W. Thomas, author of "Clinton Bradshaw," etc.; Caroline Orne, of Wolfboro', N. H.; Miss Mary Ann Browne, England, Mrs. M. St. Leon Loud, Pennsylvania; Professor J. H. Ingraham; Lucius Fitzgerald Tastitor; Nathaniel P. Willis; Theodore S Fay; Edgar A. Poe; George P. Morris, author of "Brier Cliff," and the "National Melodies,"--together with a large number of prominent writers, whose names we have not room here to insert.

This list, embracing some of the most profound original and vigorous intellects of the male sex, and the most brilliant, graceful and witty of the fair, cannot easily be paralleled by any other magazine in the country. It affords the surest guarantee of the determination and the ability of the proprietor to make the literary character of his work commensurate with its immense and increasing circulation. From the variety of talent every diversity of taste may expect to be gratified, and every kind of elegant literature receive a proper attention. Poetry, tales, sketches, essays, embodying the brilliant conceptions, the graceful imaginings, the original inventions, and the witty or profound thoughts of the able writers we have enumerated, have and will continue to administer, each in proportion, to the amusement and instruction of the readers of the Companion.

EDITORS' TABLE.

In this department is embraced short notices of those occurrences which are deemed of sufficient interest to demand attention--critical remarks upon new books, and upon the productions of the stage. It will be an object of the proprietor to preserve the reputation, which this department has acquired for sound and unprejudiced decisions.

THE EMBELLISHMENTS.

It may be safely asserted that in this interesting and striking feature, the Ladies' Companion is yet unrivalled. It is not merely in the beauty and perfection of the engravings that it excels, but also in the character of the subjects which are invariably selected with the greatest care and reflection, and with reference to their utility and artistic merit, not to the facility and consequent cheapness with which they yield themselves to the burin of the engraver. Every number is ornamented with steel plates, executed by the first artists, in the most finished manner, expressly for the work! Scriptural engravings are also occasionally published. The reader therefore, for the low price at which the "Companion" is afforded, in addition to its admirable literary articles, obtains a port folio of elegant steel engravings.

THE MONTHLY FASHIONS.

make another, and the proprietor thinks, valuable department. Attention is paid as well to the excellence and finish of the plate, as to correctness of costume. To the ladies, it furnishes a faithful and beautiful record of the mutations in dress.

THE MUSICAL DEPARTMENT.

offers an opportunity to the display of taste in the selection of pieces, which it may be safely affirmed, has been always taken advantage of. Most of the popular and valuable songs published under the immediate supervision of a distinguished musical professor, have been given to the world in the pages of this magazine. Continued attention will be paid to this department.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS.--The Ladies' Companion is published at THREE DOLLARS a year, payable in advance, or four dollars during the year.
