England and Ireland.

In our items of Foreign News, last week, we stated that the intelligence brought by the last Steamer, in regard to England and Ireland, possessed more than ordinary interest. We and Ireland. had not then time to give an abridgement of the facts--but as the subject has lost none of its novely, and as a deep interest is felt here in dependencies, we will do so now.

In many of the Cities, particularly in Cork, almost every door has chalked upon it these flaming words, "RE-PEAL, OR BLOOD."

Both parties have placed themselves in menacing situations, with a view to intimidate each other. Which of them will give way, or whether blood will have to be shed, remains to be seen. We heartily hope that the latter alternative may be avoided, and that all the difficulties will be amicably settled. Yet we see cause for the most painful forebodings, in the constant assembling of so many thousands of Repealers, in the vicinity of such large bodies of troops as are stationed all over Ireland .-There is great dauger of collision, and if the people and soldiery, should once come into contact, God only knows to what length hostilities will be carried. If no outbreak of the kind, however, should take place, we have strong hopes that there will be a peaceable adjustment of the subject, and that Christendom will be spared the horrors and calamities which must flow from a war between Great Britain
