

Importance of Life Insurance.

It is thought that many fathers and mothers are yet uninformed of the modus operandi, whereby they could make sure of something to their family. A good writer, advocating the prudence of such insurance, instances a mechanic, a clerk, or any person at the age of twenty-five. Are there many such who cannot, by economy, save annually the small sum of forty-eight dollars and a quarter for the benefit of wife and children? Yet, this small sum, annually paid into a Life Insurance Institution, would insure to his family at his death, even if it should take place twenty-four hours after the first payment the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars! And the annual payment of $96.50—a sum which, in tens of thousands of cases, is annually thrown away upon cigars, or the theatre, or dress, or some trifling amusement—would insure to his family upon his death, the comfortable competency of five thousand dollars!—Sat. Courier.
