For as many years as we can remember the locofocos have pursued Mr. Clay with a venom and malignity unparalleled in the annals of detraction and slander. No charge has been too enormous for them to event and to promulgate against him. They have represented him as a libertine, a gambler, a murderer, and as every thing else almost that is vile and inent statesman of his times, as a patriot beyond reproach, as a man of pure and exalted character. Nor have they been content to pronounce eulogiums upon him. As a further evidence of their grief, multitudes of them have draped the banners of their civic and partizan processions in mourning, and have even worn habiliaments of wee upon their own persons .-How shall this remarkable change be accounted for? Mr. Clay was the same pure patriot, the same sagacious statesman, and the same upright man, all his life-long, particulars, was just as well understood proper. then as now, and by his political opponents as well as by his political friends .-He was assailed and vituperated by the locofocos, not because they really believed that he deserved such treatment, but simply because he stood across their path and urged his countrymen to pursue measures which they disliked. Had his views of public policy accorded with their own, they would have elevated him to the rank of an idol; but as he dieffred from them they represented him to be as hideous as a demon. Now, that death has called him hence, and they have nothing more to fear from his talents or his purity, they proclaim his eminence and his worth; and, in so doing, they also proclaim their own baseness in hunting him down with merciless persecution during his long career of public service. Mr. Clay no longer stands in the way of the locofocos, and they eagerly crowd into the circles of his mourning friends to proclaim how great their grief is at his departure for the spirit-land. But, another distinguished man stands in Mr. Clay's | Hofferd, George stead as the leader of the Whig party .- Hilyard, Jacob He has spent already nearly half a centu- Jarvis, O. A. ry in the service of his country, the brigh- Jacoby, Francis est pages of whose history are adorned with the recital of his deeds-his body is covered with honorable scars gathered in defence of the rights and liberties of his countrymen-and although the most delicate and important public duties have often times been laid upon him, he has never failed to realize the most sanguine expectations of the government and of the people. Yet the same abuse the locofocos now pour upon him which they formely poured upon Mr. Clay. No epithet is too vile to be applied to him-no change is too opprobrious to be fulminated against him. Gen. Scott stands in the way of the locofocos; and they are ready to turnish his collossal fame, and to deface the most glorious passages in the history of the country, in order to gratify the deadly spirit of revenge which they feel rising up in their bosoms against him. But, let Gen. Scott die to-morrow, and the locofocos who to-day are keenest on the scent | containing about to rob him of his well-earned meed of praise would be the first to gather about his bier, and bewail his death. In the presence of death alone their slanderous spirits stand abashed, and truth finds utterance from their lips.

Drowlful Accident. - A melancholy accident occurred on Monday, the 5th inst., at Vandebilt's Landing, Cliften, Staten Island. In the afternoon, at 4 o'clock, as the steamboat Hunchback came from the City to land at that place, the Ferry Bridge gave way, precipitating a large number of men, women and children, into the river. A number were saved by the by-standers on the dock, but many were drowned. Up to our last dates, seventeen bodies had been recovered from the water, and it was feared that ten or twenty more persons had perished. The whole accident occurred owing to a most criminal to do into the tanning business. Everything neglect. The people were let in through a gate on to the bridge, and had nowhere else to stand. The bridge was densely crowded, with men, women and children. The bridge gave way on one side, and precipitated full one hundred and fifty persons a distance of six feet to the water, July 8, 1852. which was about eight feet deep. They fell as it were into a well. Those under had no chance, and the wonder is that so many were saved.

We shall increase our variety by importations from the continent of Europe, and from the new growth of the British colonies.

The steamship has brought Europe, Asia, and Africa into our neighborhood and will greatly multiply our connections, as Merchants, Travellers, and Politicians, with all parts of the world so that much more than ever it now becomes every intelligent American to be informed of the condition and changes of foreign countries. And this not only because of their nearer connection with ourselves, but because the nations seem to be hastening, through a rapid process of change, to some new state of things, which the merely political prophet cannot compute or forsee. Geographical Discoveries, the progress of Colonization, (which is extending over the whole world,) and Voyages and Travels, will be favorite matter for our selections; and, in general, we shall systematically and very fully acquaint our readers with the great department of Foreign affairs, without entirely neglecting our own.

While we aspire to make the Living Age desirable to all who wish to keep themselves informed of the rapid progress of the movenent-to Statesmen, Divines, Lawyers, and Physicians-to men of business and men of leisure-it is still a stronger object to make it attractive and useful to their Wives and Children. We believe that we can thus do some good in our day and generation; and hope to make the work indispensable in every well-informed family. We say indispensable, because in this day of cheap literature it is not possible to guard against the influx of what is bad taste and vicious in morals, in any other way than by furnishing a suffi-Bracelets, Slides, Silver Spoons, Butter cient supply of a healthy character The mental and moral appetite must be gratified.
