

The Famine in Germany.
The famine in the mountain districts of Southern Germany is yet unabated, and provisions scarce and prices exorbitant. A letter to the New York Express, dated at Prague, June 3d, says: "Families, formerly in easy circumstances, are reduced to beggary and to severe sufferings from hunger. Bakers sell bread of rye and oat bran at high prices; people gather common grass along the public roads and moss in the woods, cook and eat it to appease their hunger and prevent starvation. Such are few of the many glaring features of the great famine, not in the least exaggerated, but authenticated by official reports of local authorities to their respective governments."

Hon. Robert T. Conrad.
The friends of General Scott are much pleased that this gentleman has enlisted for the Campaign under the command of the heroic Scott. As a political writer he has no superior in the country, and as an orator he occupies the first rank of public speakers. With such a leader and such followers, the opposition will meet with a Cerro Gordo defeat. Judge Conrad made a speech at the Scott Ratification Meeting in Philadelphia. We publish the last part of it. It contains some fine hits.

"Shall we pursue the contrast to the candidates of the two conventions? How can we? There are no points of comparison. Pierce was mewing and paking in his nurse's lap when Scott, now hoary and war worn, but all the hero still, was winning a world wide renown. Whatever quality of mind or heart is most needed for the highest office in the nation—that whether it be of peace or war, of the camp or the cabinet—that is possessed in an eminent degree, by Winfield Scott. It is doubted? His achievements approve it. His Mexican campaign is a monument of transcendent genius. Study his life—it is long and lustrous—full of high trusts, civil as well as military, nobly discharged—of great dangers greatly overcome, and without one act of weakness, failure or dishonor. It is told of Pompey that when he came to claim exemption from military service, he was as the custom in Rome, led his war horse into the forum, and was asked by the Censor—'Pompey, have you served all the campaigns required by law?' He delighted his countrymen by the answer: 'I have served them all, and all under myself as General.' Thus may Scott, the persecuted and maligned, appear before his countrymen. He has served all the campaigns fought since his boyhood, and all—with a brief exception—like the Roman, 'under himself as General.' He is the hero of more wars and more battle fields than any—with no exception, however illustrious—than any American that ever breathed—in all commanded, and in all [which transcends the Roman's boast] a victor. Let Mr. Pierce—I beg pardon, General Pierce lead forth his war horse to the Forum—he must lead for should he dare to mount he must fall, as in Mexico.

"Oh, what a fall was there, my countrymen!"
Sad as the fall which awaits his attempt to mount to the Presidency. Some are born to greatness, and some achieve greatness; but, in his case a Convention seeking (as Diogenes sought with a lighted candle at midday for an honest man,) for one obscure, and only obscure, with no alarming capacity, and no rampant public virtue, stumbled over Mr. Pierce. He awoke next morning from his tranquil village slumber, and found himself famous. The Egyptians of old made a divinity of a bull; but the Locofoco Convention reversed the rule, and made a bull when they adopted such a divinity.

On the Heights of Queenstown, in 1812, Gen. Scott, after a long and bloody struggle, found himself surrounded by an overwhelming British force; and mounting a log, he there addressed his comrades—'We are in the beginning of a national war. Hull's surrender is to be redeemed. Let us then die arms in hand. Our country demands the sacrifice. Who will dare to stand by me?' ALL was the answering cry. We, too, are in the beginning of a national contest—surrounded by overwhelming numbers—but thanks to American justice and gratitude, they are friends; again Scott says—who will stand by me? And again the answer will be—ALL! The patriot who, when poor and persecuted, still so loved his country that he declined the Presidency of Mexico, with an offer of a million and a quarter of dollars, shall receive from his admiring and grateful country a loftier office, and a more exceeding weight of glory.

Corn in Illinois, it is seriously stated may be raised at an actual expense of six cents a bushel, such is the cheapness of land and cultivation, and fertility of soil.

A Race that was a Race.
We find in the Los Angeles Star, a long account of a long race, nothing short of nine miles, which was run between the Sydney mare, Black Swan, and the California horse, Sarcos, for a stake of $2,000 cash, and a thousand head of cattle. The Star states that at least $50,000 changed hands on the result of this race, which was won by the mare by seventy-five yards. She run the nine miles in nineteen minutes and twenty seconds.

The favorite digging place in Australia Mount Alexander; there the gold is turned up by tons. A party of gentlemen made three pounds each in five days. Beggers have actually become rich.

GEN. SCOTT will be defeated we do not entertain the least doubt.—Cin. Eng.
So thought our friend Santa Anna, before the battle of Cerro Gordo; but he experienced a very sudden change of opinion; so will you, when the election returns begin to 'pile in' next fall.—Forest City.

Perhaps some of our Democratic friends may be glad to see what the veteran Father RITCHIE thinks of WINFIELD SCOTT, as a Soldier and Civilian. The following extract from one of his editorials, commenting on the bad taste of the Whigs in selecting General TAYLOR as their candidate in 1848, speaks upon both points. It is
From the Washington Union of 1848.
General SCOTT is an older soldier than General TAYLOR—one who is at least equally, if not more accomplished, and who has distinguished himself by more and as brilliant battles during the war—who captured Vera Cruz, and the Castle, and the Capital of Mexico—and one, too, who HAS MORE THE QUALITY OF A CIVILIAN, AND IS BETTER KNOWN AS A WHIG."

As the lid of a coffin was about being fastened down, in Rochester, the other day, the inmate was discovered to be living. The poor fellow who came so near being buried alive, is now likely to recover.

A train of cars between New York and Albany made the trip last Wednesday in two hours and fifty-eight minutes—150 miles.

Littell's Living Age.

Extracts of letters from Judge Story, Chancellor Kent, and President Adams.
CAMBRIDGE, April 24, 1844.
I have read the prospectus with great pleasure; and entirely approve the plan. If it can only obtain the public patronage long enough, and large enough, and securely enough, to attain its true ends, it will contribute in an eminent degree to give a healthy tone, not only to our literature, but to public opinion. It will enable us to possess, in a moderate compass, a select library of the best productions of the age. It will do more: it will redeem our periodical literature from the reproach of being devoted to light and superficial reading; to transitory speculations, to sickly and ephemeral sentimentalities, and to false and extravagant sketches of life and character.

JOSEPH STORY.
New York, 7th May, 1844.
I approve very much of the plan of the "Living Age," and if it be conducted with the intelligence, spirit and taste that the prospectus indicates, (of which I have no reason to doubt,) it will be one of the most instructive and popular periodicals of the day.

JAMES KENT.
WASHINGTON, 27 Dec. 1845.
In all the Periodical Journals devoted to literature and science which abound in Europe and in this country, this has appeared to me the most useful. It contains indeed the exposition only of the current literature of the English language, but this, by its immense extent and comprehension, includes a portraiture of the human mind in the utmost expansion of the present age.

J. Q. ADAMS.
PROSPECTUS.
This work is conducted in the spirit of Littell's Museum of Foreign Literature, (which was favorably received by the public for twenty years,) but as it is twice as large, and appears so often, we not only give spirit and freshness to it by many things which were excluded by a month's delay, but while thus extending our scope and gathering a greater and more attractive variety, are able so to increase the solid and substantial part of our literary, historical, and political harvest, as fully to satisfy the wants of the American reader.

The elaborate and stately Essays of the Edinburgh Quarterly, and other Reviews; and Blackwood's noble criticisms on Poetry, his keen political Commentaries, highly wrought Tales, and vivid descriptions of rural and mountain scenery; and the contributions to Literature, History, and Common Life, by the sagacious Spectator, the sparkling Economist, the judicious Athenaeum, the busy and industrious Literary Gazette, the sensible and comprehensive Britannia, the sober and respectable Christian Observer; these are intermixed with the Military and Naval reminiscences of the United Service, and with the best articles of the Dublin University, New Monthly, Fraser's, Tatler's, Ancestor's, Hood's, & Sporting Magazine, and of Chambers' admirable Journal. We do not consider it beneath our dignity to borrow wit and wisdom from Punch; and when we think it proper, we shall increase our variety by importations from the continent of Europe, and from the new growth of the British colonies.

The steamship has brought Europe, Asia, and Africa into our neighborhood, and will greatly multiply our connections, as Merchants, Travellers, and Politicians, with all parts of the world so that much more than ever it now becomes every intelligent American to be informed of the condition and changes of foreign countries. And this not only because of their nearer connection with ourselves, but because the nations seem to be hastening, through a rapid process of change, to some new state of things, which the merely political prophet cannot compute or foresee.

Geographical Discoveries, the progress of Colonization, (which is extending over the whole world,) and Voyages and Travels, will be favorite matter for our selections; and, in general, we shall systematically and very fully acquaint our readers with the great department of Foreign affairs, without entirely neglecting our own.

While we aspire to make the Living Age desirable to all who wish to keep themselves informed of the rapid progress of the movement—to Statesmen, Divines, Lawyers, and Physicians—to men of business and men of leisure—it is still a stronger object to make it attractive and useful to their Wives and Children. We believe that we can thus do some good in our day and generation; and hope to make the work indispensable in every well-informed family. We say indispensable, because in this day of cheap literature it is not possible to guard against the influx of what is bad taste and vicious in morals, in any other way than by furnishing a sufficient supply of a healthy character: The mental and moral appetite must be gratified.

We hope that, by winnowing the wheat from the chaff, by providing abundantly for the imagination, and by a large collection of Biography, Voyages, Travels, History, and more solid matter, we may produce a work which shall be popular, while at the same time it will aspire to raise the standard of public taste.

The Living Age is published every Saturday, by E. Littell & Co., corner Tremont and Bromfield streets, Boston; Price 1-2 cents a number, or six dollars a year in advance. Remittances for any period will be thankfully received and promptly attended to.

Postage Free.
To all subscribers within 1500 miles, who remit in advance, directly to the office of publication at Boston, the sum of Six Dollars, we will continue the work beyond the year, as long as shall be equivalent to the cost of postage;—thus virtually carrying out the plan of sending every man's copy to him Postage Free; placing our distant subscribers on the same footing as those nearer to us; and making the whole country our neighborhood.

We hope for such future change in the law, or the interpretation thereof, as will enable us to make this offer to subscribers at any distance.
Complete sets of the First Series, in thirty volumes, to the end of September, 1851, handsomely bound, packed in neat boxes and delivered in all the principal cities, free of expense of freight, are for sale at $60.
Any volume may be had separately at $2, bound, or a dollar and a half in numbers.
Any number may be had for 12 1/2 cents; and it may be worth while for subscribers or purchasers to complete any broken volumes they may have, and thus greatly enhance their value.
Binding.—We bind the work in a uniform, strong, and good style; and where customers bring their numbers in good order, can generally give them bound volumes in exchange without any delay. The price of the binding is 50 cents a volume. As they are always bound to one pattern, there will be no difficulty in matching the future volumes.
