Warfare on Lotteries.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 .- The ruling made by the Postoffice Department last Saturday, that all letters addressed to lottery companies, or to persons as agents of such companies, must be reated as unmailable, has not been being rigidly enforced. The postmaster of Louisville has been informed ters, and should send them all to the Dead Letter Office. The misunderstanding in regard to the matter appears to have arisen form the fact that no authority has yet been given to postmasters to detain letters mailed to persons known to be lottery agents, out not addressed as such. partment is, however, pursuing an investigation as to the extent of the business done and the methods by which the statutes and the recent order are evaded by the lottery companies with a view to determining whether a postmaster at an office of delivery, who has judical notice of the business engaged in by a company and its agents, can hold letters which arrive in large numbers addressed to an individual whose connection with the lottery company is not openly stated. Our Question Box.
