In Sugar Creek township, Venango county, a few evenings since, a family went to church at a school house near their home, leaving several children at home in bed. A brisk fire was in the stove, the oven of which was filled with kindling. The kindling took fire, sparks fell out and caught the floor. The children awoke, got out of the house and went in their night clothes and barefooted to the school house and gave the alarm. The doxology was omitted, but the house was saved.

[Philadelphia Press, Feb. 24.] The proceedings of the meeting held Meadville on last Saturday evening published in vesterday's Press, will attract general attention throughou the State In the Congressional district, of which Crawford county forms a part, Messrs. Thomas Robinson, of Butler, and John I. Gordon, of Mercer, are the delegates to Chicago. All the counties of this district declared, more or less unequivocally, in favor of the omination of Mr. Blaine for the Presidency at the time their delegates to the State Convention were selected. But the State Convention, concurrently with the naming of these delegates instructed them to vote for General Grant's nomination, and directed that their vote should be controlled, on all questions, by the vote of the majority of the delegation. The State Convention had no right to bind, by instructng district delegates, even when nom-

the authority which appointed them. | acter: Don't the Eagle's brain is But the Convention did not do the appointing when it accepted the names chosen by the delegates in the State from the counties composing the districts. Such a choice by for the Eagle's emergency man "Z, those delegates was the equivalent of an election by the direct act of the people of the districts, and the Convention had, by the very terms of the call for the National Convention, no authority to exercise an independent choice, and was merely a convenient instrumentality for reaching promptly a necessary result. Its subsequent ac tion of instruction to them was beyond its authority, was an attempt to affix fetters which it was not theirs to bind. On principle it was an abominable act. As a policy it was reactionary and despotic, and if acquiesced in must soon spread its poison through the body politic, must corrupt streams now pure, and ultimately defile our whole organization. It cannot help but lower the tone of our political life, strengthen the power of the few at the expense of the mass, and build up, by organization, machine means of dominating public sentiment. This done, our political machinery, robbed of its beauty, would become a reproach to ourselves and a curse to our children. There is but one avenue of escape from these evils. The people of the various districts must assert their manhood. They must meet, consult and act, to save from spoliation our Republican framework. They must claim and assert the right of directing the district delegates what is their will in this grave matter of a Presidential nomination. They must rebuke the shameless tricksters who, by disgraceful means, denied to the people their voice in the Harrisburg Convention. They must stem the tide of offensive innovation by banded politicians having no higher interest than self, no nobler motive than perpetuation of control. They must save their party from the loss of the dearest privilege known to freemen, the right to have the representative express the will of the people. In this spirit we rejoice in the demonstration at Meadville. We hope to Reiber. hear of more such meetings, not conceived in anger or carried on in resentment, but in the spirit which is becoming to a people who know their rights, dare maintain them.

"The $100 Steal."

SAXONBURG, Pa., Feb. 28, 1880.

Editors Citizen—In the issue of the Eagle of the 25th, their emergency man "Z" comes to the rescue of the modest(?) incumbent of the editorial chair, and attempts to defend the crimes of the "Ring organ." Having made some inquiries in regard to the facts of the "one hundred dollar steal," I will place the facts before the public and most respectfully accept the verdict. The election law provides that the Sheriff shall publish the election proclamation in two or more county papers, and those papers so employed by the Sheriff shall be paid by the county." The Sheriff employed the Herald and CITIZEN, and did not employ the Eagle. The latter published the proclamation without any authority from the Sheriff, which was not "in the usual way," as claimed by "Z," but a very unusual way. After the Eagle had published the proclamation the Sheriff notified the Commis-sioners that he had not employed the Eagle, and the county had no right to pay for it. In due time Mr. Robinson presented his bill for $100 to Mr. Gribben for publishing the proclamation, and Mr. Gribben refused to pay it. Mr. R. then left the Commiss office, but during Mr. Gribben's absence presented the bill and it was allowed by the other Commissioners Is that "in the usual way?" Mr. Gribben called on the editor of the Eagle and advised him to return the money or there would be an exposure. Mr. Robinson said: "Mr. Gribben, I do not blame you for kicking; but the Sheriff is the man I am after, and if there is any trouble about it I will make it warm for the Sheriff." When the County Auditors came to audit the report, Mr. Gribben made known the facts and objected to auditing the $100. The other Commissioners advised the auditing of the $100, stating that Mr. Robinson said he would refund the money if there was any fuss about it. The Auditors, in order to get information in respect to the law. went to Judge Bredin's office and stated the case. The Judge told them that Mr. Gribben's position was right; that they could not properly audit it; that the Sheriff had the right to say what papers he would publish the proclamation in and what ones he would not. Now, the Sheriff did say what papers he would publish it in, and notified the Commissioners, yet payment was made for an unauthorized publication, the amount ($100) being taken out of the County treasury not only without law but against law, and some person or persons should pay it back.
