FROM REPUBLICAN PAPERS.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat The Convention, having killed off all the big Democratic Statesmen who came before it, was forced to fall back on a soldier who won all his laurels in killing and capturing Democrats in the war of the Rebellion.

ships?
The Boston Herald: In practical knowledge of the affairs of the State, Garfield has an immense advantage. He is the most statesmanlike of all the men in public to-day. His views are broad, liberal and progressive. He has a constructive mind, and he looks clearly into the future. Hancock is a conservative by nature and education. He has perfect faith in the system of government devised by the fathers, and has distinguished himself by respect for and obedience to the Constitution. The two opposing candidates represent very well the objects and aims of the two parties.

EATING CROW.

The politics of "eating crow" is in the application of the original story to people who swallow a disagreeable candidate of their own party rather than vote for the candidate of their ents. A man that "bolts" or scratches" is not a "crow-eater," and it often becomes a question for the voter whether he will "scratch"—erase the obnoxious name; "bolt" support the opponent; or "eat crow"

—vote for the objectionable candidate
as the lesser evil. After all sharplycontested nominations where bad reccords have been exposed or unfair neans of securing a nomination have been resorted to, "crow" becomes the common diet of "good party men," while those on whom party bonds sit loosely either stay away from the polls, scratch, or bolt. The following story explains how that peculiar diet

ame into vogue:

The first allusion to "eating crow" was made in the Knickerbocker Magazine a little more than a quarter of a century ago. It was a story of a summer boarding housekeeper on the Hudson, and of an indignant patron. Whenever the latter ventured to sug-gest that the spring chicken was rather ough, or that the roast beef must have en cut from the cow's hoofs, he was directly told that he was entirely "too eler." and that the autocrat of he table and the house could eat any thing, even a crow. This settled the matter for the time being, but the boarder convinced against his will was of the same opinion still, at all events, in regard to the quantity of the edi-bles placed before him. So often was the remark, "I kin eat anything; I kin eat a crow," brought down on his to try the old man. He went out gunning one day and succeeded in bagging a very fine, fat, old black crow. He went into the kitcken, and, by dint of soft words and filty lucre, induced the cook to allow him to prepare that crow for the table. He boiled it nicely and it wasn't such a bad looking dish after all. His heart misgave him; the finty old cuss would eat it after all. cook was a Scotch woman, and ed snuff He borrowed all she had and sprinkled it liberally over the crow, gave her another simmer, and then, taking it on a salver, brought it before his host, saying as he set it down, "Now, my dear sir, you have said a thousand times, if you have said it once; that you can eat crew. said a thousand times, if you have said it once; that you can eat crow.

Here is one very carefully cooked."
It is said the old man turned pale for a time said the books for 1880 have been put in the hand of the collectors. The County needs the mone; and it must be paid. moment, but braced himself against the back of his chair, and with "I kin eat crow," he began, cutting a good mouthful. He swallowed it, and then preparing for a second onslaught, he looked his boarder straight in the eye, while he ejaculated, "I've eaten crow, and took his second portion. He a third onslaught, but dropped them quickly over the region of his stomach, and, rising hurriedly and unsteadily, retreated for the door, muttering as he went, "but hang me if I hanker after it." lifted his hands mechanically, as if for

REMEMBER THE DAYS OF YOUR CHILDHOOD.

Why do not all of us to whom God. in His fatherly love, has given the care and comfort of little ones, oftener remember our own feelings in the days of our childhood in our treatment of them? Of course, with our present severe sense of the duty, of unquestioning submission on the part of children—a sense that comes with age, and with age only-we can all see that such a sentiment is rebellious, and should offers no promise of statesmanship and no pledge of progress, but only the revival of the old-time subordination of too good for this world and, oh, the the Democratic party to the dictation of pity of it! always-well, nearly alhe South. ways—dies young, so that, alas! very few of us old folks ever belonged to can: We think the Democracy has made the same kind of a mistake in nearly all, therefore, experienced this the selection of a candidate at Cincin- sort of feeling at one time or another in our bread-and-butter days. CANCER.

This disease like many others is regarded as incurable. It is not so. If it is taken in time it is as easily cured as a wart or a corn. We know very well that it is a fearful disease and will eat away until it destroys life, that is if it is neglected, but if it is attended to when it first makes its appearance, or soon after, there is no trouble in eradicating it force the variety. Persons will have to be here after, there is no trouble in eradicating it from the system. Persons will have to be here during part of the treatment, consequently there is no use writing to me for information whether it can be cured without my seeing the case.
