NEW YORK, Nov. 6 .- At the first annual meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Prof.

Thurston delivered the address.

Much, he said, remains to be done by the general government in the develyoment of the resources of this The new organization of the geological survey is such in form and in the character of its administration that we hope to see the work of determining the value of our mineralre sources done with maximum rapidity and efficiency. In tracing the progress in the various departments of American industries, he said that ninety years ago Samuel A. Slator started the first successful cotton spinning mill at Pawtucket, R. I. To-day we raise 1,500,000-000 pounds of cotton to supply mills in every New England State and nearly every other State in the Union, which manufacture $500,000,000 wor h of goods.

From the day in 1794, when the first rude woolen mill was established at Newbury, Mass., our woolen manufactures have grown in extent and in excellence of product, until to-day our 12,000 or 15,000 sets of machinery, handled by nearly 100,000 of the most skilful operatives to be found in the world, produce $250,000,000 worth of goods, which in point of cheapness and excellence compete with the best in the

We have seen the silk manufacturer, after struggling with difficulties of every imaginable sort for half a century finally secure a foothold and enter upon a period of prosperity which is as marvelous as it is encouraging. The enterprise of the Cheneys during the past generation and the steady persisence of the Patterson, N. J., manufacturers, have borne fruit in the erection of 250 mills, with a production of 830,000,000 worth of silk goods, which in strength and durability excel and in beauty are fully equal to the finest products of its French competitors at

In the manufacture of iron and steel the story is the same. We have furnaces which are supplied with every variety of the best ores, and are making 2,000,000 tons of pig iron per an-

By a wise policy of legislative protection we are practically free from that foreign competition which threat-ened to throttle our manufactures in their infancy. We consume our whole product and that is nearly fifteen per cent. of all the iron used in the world.

Of our enormous coal yield, about 50,-000,000 tons per year, a large fraction is consumed in making and working iron, 1,000,000 or more tons of which goes to market as wrought iron in a usand different shapes.

The growth of our Bessemer steel production is even more marvelous. Twenty years ago this wonderful illustration of the marvels of chemical science was looked upon as merely an interesting and curious process, of no immediate value and of most uncertain promise. To-day a single establishment is making 100,000 tons a year.

The United States is looked upon as the home of all ingenious and effective labor-saving devices. The Cor-liss engine has revolutionized the steam engine manufacture of the world. The class of men from whose ranks the members of this society are principally drawn direct, and the labors of nearly 3,000,000 of working people in a third of a million mills, are responsible for the preservation and proworth of capital direct: the payment of $1,000,000,000 of wages; the consumption of $3,000,000,000 worth of materials, and the output of $5,-000,000,000 worth of manufacture products. Fifty thousand steam engines and more than an equal number of water wheels turn the machinery of the hundreds of thousands of workshops throughout the country. The concluding portion of Prof.

Thurston's address was devoted to remarks on the future of mechanical engineering and the methods to be pur-sued in the collection of facts and the study of all phenomena involved.
