The action of the Grow men at Harrisburg, in offering to unite upon any one of seven able and good men whom they proposed as a compromise, whom they proposed as a compromise, has proven the sincerity of their motives in striving only to obtain a fit man for Senator. And the action of the Oliver men in rejecting all of the names proposed as a compromise, has proven that they are actuated by selfish and machine interests entirely. The question now simply is, will the Republicans of the State rule, or will machine politics. ### TO-DAY.

To-day, Feb. 9th, the third and final act in making a President of the United States is to be performed. First, was the act of the people, in November, in choosing the Presidential Electors. Second, was the meeting of those Electors, in their several States in December, and sending their votes to the Vice President of the United States. And now, third, is the time for counting and declaring the result at Washington. if it has not already, when every hon We do not look for any trouble. In orable obligation to the result of that fact the Democrats in Congress have given assurance there will be no obstruction thrown in the way of declaring Gen. Garfield the lawfully elected President. Four years ago it was quite different, and the Electoral Commission had to be created, owing to the fact that double sets of returns of Electors had been sent from some of the Southern States. The great question then was, how should these double returns be treated? Who should decide between them, the Vice President or Congress? The constitution is not clear and Congress has passed no new law on the subject.
