Deadly Attempt on the President's Life. SHOT DOWN in WASHINGTON

Lingering With Hopes of Recovery.

COUNTRY AROUSED AND IN-TENSELY EXCITED.

At 9:20 o'clock Saturday morning, July 2, a dastardly attempt was made to assassinate James A. Although his death was hourly expected, Mr. Garfield bore himself but which was refused this time on ac- with great courage and cheerfulness and his condition has steadily improv-

WASHINGTON, July 2.—That the deed was well planned and long premeditated there cannot be a doubt. It has been well known for several days that the President, accompanied by several members of his Cabinet and their ladies, would leave Washington this morning for a two-weeks' trip in New England. General Garfield had been looking forward to the journey with great pleasure. Mrs. Garfield was to be one of the party. Her sojourn at I,ong Branch had completely restored her to health, and Gen, Swaim had been sent to the Elberon Hotel to assart her to New York, where she was to have joined the President that afternoon. Two sons and a daughter of Gen. Garfield were with their mother, while the elder boys, James and Henry, were to have accompanied their father.

THE ASSASSIN'S ENTRY AND THE SHOOTING The President and Secretary Blaine, arm in three steps in this aisle near the B street door when Guitaau entered by the left door from the by any means a confession of foolish alarm.

—An Ohio farmer had his leg cut off by a mowing machine lately while cutting wheat on his farm. The knives were choked with straw and he was standing in front engaged in cleaning them, when some of the straw thrown them, when some of the straw thrown from his hand struck the leg of one of the horses and the team started. The left leg was cut off midway between the ankle and knee and the right leg badly lacerated. The doctors araputated the left leg just above the amputation performed by the machine. While the physicians were being brought he came near bleeding to death.

There was a larger crowd present at the depot than usual, many persons laving been attracted there to see the Fresident and the members of the Cabinet. As soon as the reports of the Cabinet. As soon as the rune of the Cabinet. As soon as the reports of the Cabinet. As soon as the rune of the Cabinet. As soon as the reports of the Cabinet. As soon as the r head. He was deathly pale but retained his consciousness. His son hent over his father and sobbed frantically. The Sepretary of State could hardly repress his emotion. Mr. Jameson and others called upon the police to disperse the crowd, that the President might have air. A small space was made, but the policemen were absolutely powerless to preserve order. The news of the assassination flew along the streets like wildfire, and within ten minutes there were over a thousand people at the station. The members of the Cabinet and their wives were notified of the event. A man burst into the car exclaiming, "The President has been murdered!" The gentlemen rushed from the car into the station, while the ladies were left in a state of speechless suspense.

CARRYING THE VICTIM UP-STAIRS.

As soon as those who surrounded the Presi doubtless as devoid of honesty as it was in days of Brigham Young's sternest despottsm, may prove to have some unintentional truth in it after all.

—There now seems to be no doubt but that the prayers of fifty millions of freemen will be answered in the preservation of President Garfield's life. One of the most beautiful and affecting spectacles ever witnessed since the beginning of the world's history has

After Gring the fatal shot he started at a rapid pace through the main waiting-room, apparently intending to escape by the entrance on the Sixth street side. He held the smoking revolf ver in his hand, but was prevented from passing by the crowd, which pushed toward the spot where the President was lying. He turned sharp about, passed within ten feet of his victim, and attempted to pass out at the B-street entrance, through which the President had just gone. A policeman named Kearney was standing on the corner of Sixth and B Streets when the shots were fired, and he range to the entrance of the last-named street just in was standing on the corner of Sixth and B Streets when the shots were fired, and he ran to the entrance of the last-named street just in the tone the form the door. Without knowing that he was the assassin, but attracted by the man's desire, to get away, the officer grabbed him and held him as in a vise. Guiteau struggled a little to get away, his shirt being torn in the encounter, but Special Officer Scott came to Kearney's assistance and the murderer submitted quietly. "Yes," said the assassin, "I have killed Garfield, Arthur is President of the United States, I am a Stalwart. I have a letter that will tell you all about it. I want you to take it up to General Sherman." His pisted was taken from him and he was removed without delay to Police Headquarters, corner of Pennsylvania Avenue and Four-and-a half Street. Quite a crowd followed the officers and the prisoner to head quarters. But no violence toward him was attempted. In fact, but few of the people who saw him rushed through the streets were aware of the gravity of his offense. He was entered on the police books as follows:

Charles Guiteau, arrested at 9.25 a. m., July 2, 1881, for shooting President Garfield; aggel 36, white, horn in United States and a lawyer hay profession; weight 130 pounds; has dark prown hair, thin whiskers and sallow complexion; dressed in a dark suit with black slouch hat.

HIS LETTER TO THE WHITE HOUSE.

HIS LETTER TO THE WHITE HOUSE.

After answering the questions which led to the entry above quoted, Guiteau was searched and placed in one of the cells at headquarters. A number of papers were found upon the assassin, all but one of which the authorities refuse to make public. This one is as follows. It shows clearly that the murder was premeditated:

ow Roessing's family, whose beloved agan and prother Congad Roessing died that day at 4 o'clock P, M.

—The finding among Gulteau's papers of many clippings from so-called "Stalwart" papers would seem to indicate that the men who have lately been opposing the Administration so villianously are indirectly responsible for the attempted assassination of the President. There has been nothing more disgusting in our national politics for a long time than the articles entitled "The Wriggler," "Mulligan Guard," "Chum Cabinet," etc, ridiculing the President and his cabinet, that is an excellent medicine to keep always in the two of one of his boots. He was taken before Est. Walker and committed on the new Wather Annual Politics of the Wather Hause:

On the way the prisoner in conversation with Denversed freely. In conversation with Detective McElfresh he said: "Mr. McElfresh, I contemplated this act six weeks ago and intended to shoot the President at that time. I laid for him at the depot when the party went to Long Branch, but Mrs. Garfield looked so sick and delicate I didn't have the heart to shoot him. No accompliees were associated with me. I did it all myself.

"What induced you to commit this abominable crime," asked McElfresh.

"It was to save the Republican party. We were in danger of destruction under such an Administration as that initiated by Garfield," calmly replied the assassin.

That afternoon she dictated the following dispatch to her grandson, Henry A. Garfield, Executive Mansion, Washington:

"The news was broken to me this morning, and shocked me very much. Since receiving your telegram I feel much more hopeful. Tell James that I hear he is cheerful and that I am glad of it. Tell him to keep in good spirits and accept the love and sympathy of a mother, sisters and friends."

ELIZA GARFIELD.

THE NEWS IN NEW YORK. "The greatest danger I see in the President's death." said a well-known cittlzen, "is in the course that the Vice-President might be induced to follow. Should he attempt to undo the work of Mr. Garfield or to allow his faction duced to follow. Should he attempt to undo the work of Mr. Garfield or to allow his faction to profit at the expense of the whole party, as represented now in the Prosident, it would be practically placing a premium on assassination.
Such a course would demoralize the party and the country, and lead to deplorable consequences. On the other hand, if Mr. Arthur should follow in the footsteps of President Garfield, and try to unite the party and harmonize
the country, he would win favor for himself, which he does not now possess, and confidence for his administration. The great uncertainty of what may follow the President's death adds to the sorrow of the Nation at this time."

The general tone of the talk in the hotel corridors and in other parts of the city was not at all favorable to Mr. Conkling and his partisans.
It was commonly remarked that Guiteau would never have committed his dastardly orime if the malignity of faction had not been pushed to such an extreme that the President had been assailed with the vilest calumnies. For the bitterness of feeling which had been aroused,
and for the attacks on the President in speech and in print Mr. Conkling and his followers were held responsible in the current comments on the orlme, and they were censured unsparingly for the course they had pursued.

"This is the result of a faction fight," said a well known Judge, "and Mr. Conkling's friends has led this deluded assassin to believe that he could make a hero of himself by killing Mr. Garfield." The fact that the VicePresident went to Washington accompanied by city detectives, and the remarkable scene at
