As the properties to be sold by the Sheriff at next Court were only published in but one paper of general circulation throughout the county, we publish a synopsis of them in another place. This placing of the legal advertising of the county in papers of more local circulation is an imposition upon a majority of the people of the county.

Hon. Samuel Calvin, of Hollidaysburg, recently sold the timber right on a tract of land in White township, Cambria county, for the snug sum of $45,000. The Window-Glass Manufacturers and Operatives' Committee, who have lately been in session at Pittsburgh arranging a scale of wages, have agreed on a sliding scale similar to the one in operation for years between Iron Manufacturers and the Amalgamated Association. It sounds a trifle sensational to say that at the present rate of settlement of the agricultural of our public domain lying within the arable region, will be all taken up within three years. Yet that is precisely the estimate of the Public Land Commission which has just completed its labors and made a report which cannot however, be printed for public distribution until Congress shall have made an appropriation for the work.

A case from Greenville last week had to be continued because the principal witness was a member of the National Guard, and was absent at the annual encampment. Judge McDermitt directed the District Attorney to take out an attachment for the witness, saying "it was time people were taught that the war has not ended seventeen years, and that the civil power is above the military power."—Mercer Dispatch.

The explosive character of flour dust, to which attention was first sharply directed by the disastrous fires at Minneapolis over three years ago, and which was additionally illustrated less than three weeks since by the blowing up of part of Ehrle's brewery in New York through a spark setting fire to the dust in a malt grinding apartment, received still further confirmation last week in the destruction of the Atlantic Mills in St. Louis.

It now appears that the reason given by the Chinese Government for recalling the Chinese students in this country is that they have abandoned their national political views and religion, and have become Americanized. If it is true, as is reported, that a Chinese student was ordered home some years ago, and beheld for similar reasons, it is natural that the students here should be rather loath to return to the Flowery Kingdom.

The campaign in Ohio and that in Virginia constitute at present nearly the sum total of political movements. Mr. Bookwalter, the Democratic candidate for the Ohio Governorship, seems to be following the line of action devised by Mr. Tilden, and adopted, with poor success, by Mr. English in Indiana. He is substituting personal agents for the recognized political workers, and is depending more upon personal solicitation than upon agitation and political demonstrations. This is in the main the English way of approaching constituencies, and thus far it has not met with much success in America, where Americans prefer the public appeal from their public men; and while the speeches of our campaigns are too often addressed to passions as ignoble as any that can be reached in the "still hours," there is in them at least the decency of pretending to offer public reasons and impersonal motives for the voter's support.

Soberer counsels have prevailed in the English House of Lords in regard to the Land Bill. Of the considerable series of amendments by which the Peers had disfigured the bill, Mr. Gladstone agreed to but two of importance, and with this Lord Salisbury has been forced to content himself. Mr. Gladstone has redeemed his pledge to stand or fall by this bill. At the close of week before last it seemed as though nothing but a dissolution of this Parliament and an appeal to the constituencies would suffice to secure its passage. The Premier did not shrink from even this alternative. He swept from the measure one after another of those disfiguring amendments, as calmly as though he were the admitted dictator of the situation. To one of his concessions Mr. Parnell offered decided opposition, on the ground that it will tend to make nearly every case a case for litigation, and in that litigation "the office" is to have the best of it.

A SUPERB ESTABLISHMENT.—We direct attention to the advertisement in another place, of Mr. Adam Troutman. He now has in stock the largest and best stock of silks, satins, cashmeres and other fine dress goods to be found in Butler, and taking into consideration the superiority of the quality of his goods, compared to those of another firm in Butler which extensively advertises its prices, his are the cheapest.

"The best is always the cheapest," and Troutman's are the best. Mr. Troutman has been doing business at his present stand for some fifteen years, and during that time has built up a large trade. A year or so ago he enlarged his store building, and it is now one of the largest and handsomest store buildings in the town. Besides Dry Goods he keeps in stock an assortment of Queensware, Glassware and choice Groceries. You can get almost anything you need at Troutman's, and any person who reads this, and who has never been in Troutman's store should not fail to visit it at the first opportunity.

GO TO THE FAIR.—There are a few farmers in almost every county or local fair, and of course take no interest in them. In pursuing this policy they are losers, though it would doubtless be difficult to make them think so.

There is much for every intelligent farmer to learn at the fair, and if he would keep abreast of the times it is his plain duty, rather highest privilege, to seize every opportunity which shall give him a more extended knowledge and a greater familiarity with everything that pertains to agriculture and horticulture.

At such times he can compare notes with his brother farmers, and by listening to their experiences, and by noting the experience of others with the same, he may impart, as well as gain, some useful hints which shall be of use in the future. There is no better place for such discussion and such "experience meeting" than at the fair. It also gives him an opportunity to see the latest improved machinery and to get on the spot, the unprejudiced opinions of the farmer friends, to guide him in purchasing for himself. There is machinery on exhibition every year, which some farmer would never see at all if he absented himself from these exhibitions.

Not only should every one go to the fair, but he should contribute, from his farm and garden products, in making the fair a success. Almost every one has something "unusual," some novelty which will add to the attractions, therefore we say to every farmer "Go to the fair, and do all in your power to support and to elevate it."

ROBBERY OF ROESSING'S STORE.—When Mr. Benj. Jack, a clerk in Mrs. B. Roessing's store, near the depot in this place, entered the store last Saturday morning about 9 o'clock, he found that the store had been entered, the safe blown open, and that the store was full of burglars. The burglars entered by the side door facing the alley, which they tried open with tools taken from Spingler's wagon maker shop. To open the safe they drilled a hole right into the lock, midway between the handle and the combination knob and inserted powder and fuse. They then drilled the heads of two or three of the rivets in the door. These rivets are so thickly covered with paint and on most safes cannot be seen, and the fact that the burglars found them without trouble, or scratching the door, indicates that at least one of them was an expert at the business. Before firing the fuse they covered the safe with bags to deaden the sound of the explosion. The explosion separated the door into two parts and completely shattered the lock, and the burglars had no more trouble. The noise was heard by the neighbors on both sides of the store building. Mrs. Hazlett heard it and awakened her son-in-law, Dan. Malarek, but he supposed the noise was made by some rats in the kitchen, did not get up. Mrs. Wenzel was awakened by the explosion and went to the window, saw three men coming out of the store by the side door, but her husband was away and she was afraid to go outside the house to give an alarm. This was about three o'clock Sunday morning. The burglars fastened the outside door carefully and were in no hurry about leaving town, having been seen after daylight washing themselves at the creek. For some days previous to the robbery a party of tramps were noticed in town, and on Saturday one of them was in Roessing's store for quite a while, during which time he begged a piece of tobacco and also a dime to get a cup of coffee with. One or two of these men were seen in company with the burglar, and one of them was in town last week. Mr. Boyle, of the Boyle House at the depot, complains that tramps are so numerous about the depot that it is unsafe to be out of doors after dark.

BEST ON RECORD. I believe Ely's Cream Balm the best preparation for Catarrh now on record. My patrons all speak well of it. I have sold one hundred and forty-four bottles in less than five months. I ordered another gross a week ago, and have sold twenty-one bottles from the second gross. It sells upon its merits. John H. Pheas, Druggist, Scranton, Pa. Jan. 28, 1880. Price 50 cents.

AN INDIVIDUAL ARTICLE.—The readers of the Argus have no doubt seen the advertisement of Ely's Cream Balm in another column. An article like 'Cream Balm' has long been desired, and now that it is within the reach of suffering humanity, it is not surprising that there is every reason to believe they will make the most of it. Dr. W. E. Buckman, W. E. Hamman, Druggist, and other Easterns have given it a trial, and all recommend it in the highest terms.—Easton, Pa. Daily Argus, Oct. 7, 1879.

Our Boys in Blue. SALTSBURG, Aug. 16, 1881.

EDITORS CITIZEN.—During the past week the 2nd Brigade N. G. P. has been in camp near Saltsburg. The splendid location of the camp; the favorable weather and the wise judgment of the commanding officer, Gen. Beaver, combined to make the encampment the most satisfactory held for a number of years. By the recent laws the Guard has been greatly reduced and each man receives pay for five days service. To make up for this advance of pay, the laws governing the men are much more severe than formerly, a fine of $25 being imposed for non-attendance at inspection, and the regulations in camp being much more strictly enforced. About 3,000 men were in camp, and though the supply of intoxicating liquor was greatly restricted, they still seemed to enjoy the affair very much. The proficiency of many of the companies in the "school of soldiers" was greatly marked.

At a contest of picked squads from the different companies of the 15th Regiment, for the championship at target practice, on Saturday, Co. F. held the position gained the day before in the general contest, Co. D. came in second and E. third. Out of 32 shots Co. F. put 31 through the target, scoring 82; Co. D. 27-77, and E. 27-73. Co. F. was represented by Messrs. Kiddie, McCoy, Cooper, Vanhara, Vosler, Scott, Dunwoody, and Co. E. by Jackson, Dickey, Ziegler, Ramsey, Shannon, McConnel and Thompson. These two companies being located at North Liberty and Butler have arranged for frequent meetings during the year for trial of skill.

A certain member of Co. E. is known throughout the entire camp as "For God's sake," that phrase occurring in every other sentence the man utters.

A Remarkable Dream. Dr. Von Meyerhoff, exhanstied by profound study of the "Conquest of Mexico," with the assistance of "Soane's" Spanish Pronouncing Dictionary in his hands, turned once more round upon his virtuous couch and yielded up his spirit to the tender embraces of "Morpheus." He dreamed that he was at the gate of Heaven. Peter, who was working hard to turn the key in the rusted lock, accosted him with, "What are you doing here so soon?" Dr. "Well, well, now, do you not know that the time table changed?" Dr. "Yes, the time table for going down—south, but not going north." Dr. "Come here against my anticipations; if I do not possibly make it, you will let me in I will." Dr. "Pooh—pooh, nothing of the kind, if you can show that you died a natural death, I would not mind coming up here to testify." Dr. "Have you references?" Dr. "Apollo and Judge Browne." Dr. "Have you a letter of recommendation from the Germania Orchestra?" Dr. "I did not know I would get here so soon, I had not asked for recommendation when I left Butler; but I have no doubt it can be procured." Dr. "That will do." Here he opened the gate and the Doctor entered, and from the recesses of the heavenly quarters sounded "Life of Life." The Philharmonic, the Germania Orchestra, were all there singing and playing, surrounded by the angels. But the Doctor was so overtaken with astonishment by seeing "our model man" playing on the big drum, that Soane's Spanish Pronouncing Dictionary fell out of his hands to the ground, the noise of which awoke him out of his dream, and he found himself on more on this terrestrial globe—oh pshaw!

On My. Dr. Baxter's Opinion. New York, August 17. The Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle met Chief Medical Purveyor Baxter, and inquired his opinion respecting the President's condition. Dr. Baxter said so far as he was informed the wound had been ably treated, that he feared a proper understanding of the President's dyspeptic predisposition had not been carefully looked into, and that he attended President Garfield for the past 10 years, and knew, perhaps, more than any other physician respecting his constitution and its defects. President Garfield, although of a stalwart physique, suffered from chronic dyspepsia and delicate stomach, superinduced by sedentary habits and mental strain. His condition was such that he was in a delicate position; he had two forms of disposition: Eating too rapidly without proper mastication and sitting up at an unusually late hour at night over his books and in consideration of his public life and he has, therefore, for years been a victim to chronic dyspepsia. Of course, under these circumstances, he suffered from the effects of severe gunshot wound, the weakness of his constitution in this respect should have been a matter of the gravest consideration. Dr. Baxter fears this has not been as thoroughly considered as the occasion demanded.

Arthur and his Friends. Vice President Arthur remained at his home to-day and was visited by numerous political friends. He received official bulletins from the White House and some private dispatches, but none that summoned him to Washington. It was intimated by some of his friends that even though the President should die there was not the same urgency for the Vice President to be at the Capitol, and assume the duties of his office that existed when the President was first shot. It was said, however, that he was prepared for a change and it could be made now without the fear and excitement which might have attended it six weeks ago. Private dispatches were received by the Vice President at a late hour to-night. He was prepared to go to Washington, he said, whenever summons reached him, although he had not given up hopes of the President's recovery. Among those who called upon the Vice President in the course of the day were General Grant, ex-Senator Conkling, who was accompanied by Senator Logan of Illinois, and many others. His house was almost full of visitors at one time. Last night there were present in the house with the Vice President until a late hour, Senator Jones, of Nevada, Police Commissioner French, George Bliss and some others. Mr. Conkling remained at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. His private secretary carried some messages to and from the Vice President. The secret at Vice President Arthur's house is, as it is described, by eye-witnesses as something remarkable.

It was at one time fairly crowded with visitors. Most of them seemed to be in an entirely cheerful frame of mind.

It appeared more like a political reception than a company of citizens who were awaiting news of the President's condition. Laughter was audible even outside of the house. New York special to Cincinnati Commercial, August 16.
