SAYINGS BY GARFIELD.

After the battle of arms comes the battle of history.

I would rather be beaten in right than succeed in wrong.

Present evils always seem greater than those that never come.

Growth is better than permanence, and permanent growth is better than all.

It is one of the precious mysteries of sorrow that it finds solace in the unselfish thought.

Statesmanship consists rather in removing the causes than in punishing or erasing the results.

Ideas are the great warriors of the world, and he who has no ideas behind it is simply brutality.

Eternity alone will reveal to the human race its debt of gratitude to the peerless and immortal name of Washington.

It is as much the duty of all good men to protect and defend the reputation of worthy public servants as to detect public wrongs.

Occasion may be the bugle call that summons an army to battle, but the blast of a bugle can never make soldiers or win victories.

Throughout the whole web of national existence we trace the golden thread of human progress toward the higher and better ages.

An act of bad faith on the part of a State or municipal corporation, like poison in the blood, will transmit its course to succeeding generations.

Bad faith on the part of an individual, a city, or even a State, is a small evil in comparison with the calamities which follow bad faith on the part of a sovereign government.

If there be one thing upon this earth that mankind would admire better than another it is a brave man; it is a man who dares to look the devil in the face and tell him he is a devil.

We should do nothing inconsistent with the spirit and genius of our institutions. We should do nothing for revenge, but everything for security; nothing for the past, everything for the present and future.

ADVERTISING THAT PAID.

John Manning, the Sheriff of Deadwood, D. T., was in St. Louis on business, and it was in St. Louis that Manning met the man in St. Louis who had been up to Deadwood and left owing a man several hundred dollars, which was to be paid as soon as he got home. Manning met the man in St. Louis, and he said he would hand him the money next day, but the days passed and the money did not come, though the man was simply able to pay. So one morning Manning inserted a personal in a newspaper to the effect that if the man who left Deadwood between two days did not pay the money he forgot to pay, before night, the whole circumstance would be published the next day. The notice was signed 'John Manning, Sheriff of Deadwood.' Before nine o'clock a young man called at Manning's hotel and said he came to pay twenty-two dollars he had borrowed to go out of Deadwood. Manning found out who the money was borrowed from, and took it to carry to the Deadwood citizen, remarking that he was not the man referred to, but it was a mighty nice thing that he would carry money to a friend. The next man to call was the man he wanted, and he paid the money and apologized, and begged the Sheriff to say nothing about it. During the day seven citizens of St. Louis called on Manning and paid him money for citizens of Deadwood, being the Sheriff of Deadwood, and Manning who would not carry money to a friend. The next man to call was the man he wanted, and he paid the money and apologized, and begged the Sheriff to say nothing about it. During the day seven citizens of St. Louis called on Manning and paid him money for citizens of Deadwood, being the Sheriff of Deadwood, and Manning who would not carry money to a friend.

GOING TO MAKE SHORT WORK OF HIM.

Major Sanger, who is known in military slang as a 'bantam,' was returning one day recently from Bismarck to fort Lincoln, which is across the river, and the ambulance in which he was riding was delayed by a team and wagon driven by one of the class known as 'mule-wackers.' The driver of the ambulance and the mule-wacker got into a wordy altercation, and Major Sanger got very indignant at what he believed to be impertinent language and unwarranted interference in his journey. He jumped from the ambulance, a Tom 'Thumb in size a Goliath in fury,' and exclaimed:

'Get that wagon out of the way!'

The mule-wacker looked at him quizzically and asked:

'Who the devil are you?'

'I am Major Sanger, of the army, sir, and I want you to get that wagon out of the way.'

The mule-wacker ejected a mouthful of tobacco through the rear window, and remarked:

'Do you know what I will do with you, Major Sanger, of the army, sir, if you don't make less noise with your mouth?'

'What will you do?' inquired the major, looking as large and fierce as possible.

'I'll set a mouse-trap and catch you, Major Sanger, of the army, sir, and give you to my puppy to play with.'

Chronic Looseness of the Bowels results from imperfect digestion. The cause lies in the torpidity of the liver. A regular habit of body can be secured by taking Simmons' Liver Regulator to aid digestion, to stimulate the dull and sluggish liver and rid the system of excessive and poisonous bile. The Regulator creates acidity of the stomach, cures dyspepsia and permanently cures regularity of the bowels alike free from laxity or costiveness.

I have never seen or tried such a simple, efficacious, satisfactory and ever-acting remedy in my life as Simmons' Liver Regulator.

CHESTNUTS.

Brown children of the autumn wood, You tell me of the olden time, When o'er the hillside paths I roamed, In bright October's golden prime.

When 'neath the maple's golden prime, I dreamed the pleasant hours away; While round me like a picture fair, The woods in their beauty lay.

And the white, mist-like fairy veil, Came slowly creeping up the hill, From where the river hastened on, To the broad pond beside the mill.

There 'mid the grass and fragrant ferns, I saw the leaves all turn to gold, Amid the leaves all fragrant ferns, The chestnuts lay around me strewn.

Ah! then what joyous task was mine, My basket with spiced nuts to fill; While 'mid the boughs the light-winged jay Gives me a welcome loud and shrill.

How well I love each woodland voice, For the chestnut's low and low song, The music of the air-harps wild, Borne by the wandering winds along.

That mystic seat beneath the trees, The wood with spiced nuts to fill, Bring back to me my vanished youth, And I am once again a child.

SPEECH OF HON. C. S. WOLFE.

Reasons Given for his Candidacy.

At the request of many Republicans of this county, we publish the following extracts from the speech of Hon. Charles S. Wolfe, delivered in Philadelphia on Oct. 4th inst. It is philosophic, owing to its length, to give the whole of his speech. But in the following extracts will be found the principal reasons he assigns for being an Independent Republican candidate for the office of State Treasurer, to be elected November 8th inst:

REFORM WITHIN THE MACHINE IMPOSSIBLE.

But suppose we admit that supremacy inside the organization is possible, that the pecuniary or selfish benefit, for which we battle—the liberation, purification and elevation of the party and the fulfillment of its destiny? Will those against whom we war observe the law of party fealty they lay down to us? My observation and experience do not persuade me that they will.

'Stick to the ticket, made by them, is a good motto, and I do not intend to pursue their work of plunder and self-aggrandizement. Take from them their occupation and opportunities by the ascendancy within the party of a higher, purer and more patriotic spirit, and they have no further use for the party nor its candidates. Then, its glorious history has no other charm to them than the pecuniary or selfish benefit, it has brought them. When the Republican banner can no longer be to them the standard under which to make fresh conquests of spoils they will cease to follow it. In 1845 Simon Cameron, for the purpose of securing his election to the United States Senate, bolted from the Democratic party. J. Donald Cameron's ambition does not warrant its aid in the election of Democratic and Independent candidates for the Legislature in Huntingdon county in order to defeat the re-election of Senator John Scott and thereby to secure to the family the monopoly of Pennsylvania national patronage. Four years ago "the bosses" defeated Major Hart, a good soldier and a worthy citizen, to Xoyce State Treasurer to accomplish their own ends and to rebuke President Hayes for his impertinence to the present Senator Cameron. In the gubernatorial election in 1878, after who he speaks to you had been nominated by a Republican popular vote of three to one, carrying every district but one in the State, he was elected.

Second—That after Colonel Stewart's announcement Mr. Baily became a candidate for the office of State Treasurer. That General Baily went to Harrisburg either at the request of Cameron and his friends, or at least, for the purpose of arranging for their support.

Fourth—That he was not a candidate simply that Fayette county might be honored in the office.

It must be evident to every one that he was a candidate simply to defeat Colonel Stewart for his disobedience to Cameron's orders at Cincinnati and that his nomination was effected by Cameron and his friends as a reward for his obedience to the unit-rite and Grant instructions and disregard of the law. It was the favor of "the bosses," as he has been called, that secured his nomination. It was a full guarantee that he could be relied upon for faithful service to them in the office of State Treasurer. The bosses—Cameron, Quay, Chris. Magee, McManes, Leeds and Rowan—nominated Mr. Baily. It was not his character, nor soldier record, nor fitness, nor popularity that secured his nomination. It was the favor of "the bosses," his availability as a candidate, as they supposed, and his proven pliability if elected Treasurer, that accomplished the result. General Baily's alleged good character and soldier record would avail him more were they combined with the people's favor and confidence arising from unwavering obedience to their will and divorced from the favor of the "bosses," with their sins and evil practices.

Let us briefly trace the history of the Treasury contest and of the Convention. With the election of Senator Mitchell there was an understanding that the office of State Treasurer would cease and an honorable and conciliatory course of conduct, such as would bring real and lasting harmony, should be pursued. Early in the year it was understood that "the Regulars" were willing to concede the Treasury nomination to an Independent or Administration Republican. I say Administration Republican, for the Senatorial struggle we had the assurance of President Garfield's sympathy and official protection. Senators Lawrence and Davies and Representative Mapes were spoken of as candidates. No "Regular" was named. Mr. Mapes declined. Later, Senator Lawrence withdrew. Senator Davies was in the sole possession of the field. He was neither an anti-Stewart nor an anti-Cameron man. His affiliations and co-operation

FOR STATE TREASURER.

The Standard this week presents the name of Colonel Andrew Stewart, of Fayette county, as a candidate for the Republican nomination for State Treasurer. It is generally conceded that the nomination for the time should fall to the western part of the State, and the only candidates thus far spoken of are Senator Lawrence of Washington county and Representative Mapes of Venango. The former declines to enter the canvass, as will be seen by his card in another column, and the latter also, we learn, will not be a candidate. We therefore urge the claims of Fayette county, and believe that they are at this time entitled to special consideration at the hands of Republicans in western Pennsylvania.

It will be remembered that Colonel Stewart was a candidate for State Treasurer before the Lancaster Convention of 1875, when Henry Baily of Erie was nominated. He was supported by the delegations from Fayette, Green, Somerset, Allegheny and other western counties, receiving a handsome vote in the Convention. Since that the nomination has twice gone to the eastern part of the State. We think it should now return to the west, and Fayette county's position in the contest six years ago should give it precedence at this time. Colonel Stewart is well known throughout the State and he possesses in a high degree those qualities that go to make up an available candidate in a dangerous year, when personal strength must compensate for the lack of political excitement. It 1874 he was made the Republican candidate for Congress in the 12th District, and in that disastrous year when Democratic Congressmen were everywhere elected he reduced the adverse majority against him by 1,200 votes. His father represented this district in Congress for years, and by his vigorous defense of the principles of protection earned for himself the name of "Old Andy."

Under date of August 5 I received a letter from Fayette county, in which the writer, a most estimable and reliable gentleman, says: "I do not know how Senator Cameron will regard the Colonel's (Stewart's) claims, as the latter displeased him in 1876 by pre-emptively voting for Mr. Blaine at Cincinnati against the Senator's protest."
