Among the acquaintances of my youth there was one Peter Cox, and I am sorry to say that, from what little stock of patience he may have possessed, he invested none of it in politeness. At all events he did not do it when he entered business. Peter was a builder by trade, and one of the most thorough and faithful workmen in the country. If he undertook a contract, he was sure to perform his part punctually and properly. Still he was not always employed, for many who might otherwise have hired him were repulsed by his uncouth manner of treating them, and sought assistance elsewhere.

BAPTISTS' OWN VERSION.
Parting from the Bible Society
The great body of Christian believers in this country known as the Baptist denomination has broken at last from the powerful religious corporation, the American Bible Society, representing all other Protestant denominations. The cause of the separation has been the revised edition of the New Testament, which, in the opinion of Baptist divines and other scholars, does not present the subject of baptism in the spirit of the original text. After a careful consideration of all the differences introduced into the body of the work, however, all the readings of the American revisers and discarding the English. These renderings, among other differences from the work published by the American Bible Society, instead of saying 'baptize with water,' give 'baptize in water,' and are therefore in conformity with the doctrine which Baptists teach and are accepted.

DEVISING WAYS AND MEANS.
As the issue of this edition is expensive, involving a greater cost than the other Bibles can be had from the Bible Society, the extent to which their publication and distribution will be carried depends upon a question of ways and means. A meeting has been arranged, to take place in New York on Thursday evening next, 'to agree upon measures,' as was said in the letters sent out, that will command the confidence of the entire Baptist denomination, that will meet promptly the pressing demands for the Scriptures and especially supply the wants of six millions of freedmen, a great majority of whom are connected with our denomination and have claims upon us as Baptists. If this meeting carries out what is expected of it, the new Baptist Bibles containing the literal translation of the American divines and scholars—only two of whom were Baptists, by the way—will be printed and circulated on an extensive scale, although the basis of supply and distribution for home use at first will be copies of the old King James version, purchased in large quantities from the American Bible Society. While the Baptists will continue to buy from the Bible Society copies of the old version they reserve the right to issue a different revised edition of their own and do not mean to let the Bible Society do their missionary distribution for them, but will take up that work themselves and push it with all their energy.

THE BAPTISTS' ARGUMENT.
As an argument against their treatment at the hands of the Bible Society the Baptists have defined their position in a statement as follows:
'God honored the Baptists by making them the leaders in the modern missionary enterprise and in the work of giving the Bible to the world. William Carey, a Baptist, was the first modern missionary. He and his associates published and translated the Bible in the languages of a more than one hundred of the human race, and, as expressed by the London Quarterly Review, did more for spreading the Scriptures among the heathen than had ever been accomplished or even attempted by all the world besides.' Joseph Hughes, a Baptist minister, was the chief organizer of the British and Foreign Bible Society and was its secretary as long as he lived. Baptists were prominent in founding and enriching the American Bible Society. These great societies aided in circulating the versions of Carey and Judson until in an evil hour and in a sectarian spirit further help was refused, except on conditions humiliating to Baptists and at the expense of their consciences. Baptists were then compelled to work alone, and for years they exhibited great zeal and abundant liberality. Divisions subsequently caused their zeal to languish, and for twenty years past they have done nothing worthy of so great a body of Christians with such efficient aid. Baptists were earnest and efficient in promoting the work of procuring a corrected version of the English New Testament, which resulted in the recently revised edition. The American revisers, but two of whom were Baptists, have furnished a version which uniformly teaches that believers were baptized in water. This revision, which does so much honor to the Christian scholarship and candor of the American committee, and is the most perfect edition of the New Testament, has been published and widely circulated by our Baptist Publication Society. Baptists were led to believe, recently, by men not Baptists, prominent in the councils of the American Bible Society, that the barriers to their return would be removed—that Baptists once driven out would be welcome back. Later events have shown that while there are many in that society who regret what was formerly done, any union or co-operation of Baptists with the American Bible Society is now impossible.

FRUITLESS EFFORTS TO PREVENT IT.
The translations of Carey and Judson were made in 1835, nearly forty years ago, and were both from the original Greek. Judson translated into Burmese and Carey into Hindostanee and they each made the verb baptize to mean 'in' the water. Carey was associated with the British Bible Society and Judson with the American. When the societies found out how they had translated baptism they refused to pay for printing the Bibles and the translators had to fall back on

Who Kissed away the Tear?
Is anything sadder than the human heart? Nature sends a frail, green vine creeping across the earth to reach a grim wall and cover it with life. We bless nature as we see these things, and yet we do not realize that human hearts are ever doing the same. One day, months ago, a rosy-faced child looking from a window saw a queer old man go limping past, his hand tapped on the pane and the old man looked up. The sight of that sweet face opened his old heart, and he went on his way feeling richer than for many a month past. He was the grim wall—the child was the green vine. He passed again, and again the child saw the old man, and for days and weeks they never missed seeing each other. At each meeting the vine crept nearer to the wall—the wall appeared less grim and forbidding. One day the "wall" laid aside his old hat for a better one. Another day he had a new coat. Again he was clean shaven, and the "vine" scarcely recognized him. No one knew the old man, but all knew that he was feeling the influence of the vine.

Two Speeches.
A practical logic is justly served when his victim pays him in his own coin. Among the horrors of the "stump" is told a capital instance of this sort of retribution. The characters in the story were the late Senator Morton and Gen. George A. Sheridan of Louisiana.

An Old-Hand Way to Measure
Few farmers know the size of their fields or how many acres they contain. A field of the writer's before it came into his possession had been plowed and reaped by contract for fifteen acres. On measuring it, it was found to have but twelve acres. It is desirable, in fact indispensable for good work, that a farmer should know how many acres each field contains, for otherwise he cannot apportion seed or manure for it, nor can he tell how much time it should require to be plowed. A measuring cord should be part of the furniture on every farm. To make one, procure sixty-seven feet of strong rope, one inch a round; make a loop or a loop, ring or a bar at each end, and make these precisely sixty-six feet apart. Then tie a piece of red rag in the center. One acre of ground will be a piece four of the cords (chains) long and two and one-half wide, equal to sixteen by ten rods, making 160 square rods to one acre. The advantage of the ring or loop is that one person can measure alone by driving a stake in the ground to hold the rope while he stretches it out. The rope should be soaked in tar and dried, which will prevent it from shrinking when wet.
