The Therapeutic Gazette, in discus-sing the relations of the physician to the pharmacist, has the following: "That failure of treatment may be due the inferior character of the medicathe inferior character of the medica-ment, the experience of the majority of our readers can doubtless attest. The reputation of the physician is thus very largely at the mercy of the druggist and pharmacist. Yet how few persons are practically alive to this fact. Those who make it a point to satisfy themselves as fully as may be of the quality of the article dispensed on their perscriptions, are greatly in the minority. In these days of keen competition in all branches, both of the trades and the professions, the preparation of med-icine has not ascaped the tricks and de-vices, the adulteration and depreciation of essential properties, which abound in other directions, all with a view to the production of goods with which to undersell those which strictly coaform to the recog-nized standard of excellence evil, cent-per-cent, retainer, bar-veneer, lence.
