Republican State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR, JAMES A. BEAVER, of Centre county. FOR JUDGE OF SUPREME COURT, WILLIAM H. KAWLE, of Philadelphia.

Ind. Republican State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR, JOHN STEWART, of Franklin county. FOR JUDGE OF SUPREME COURT, GEORGE JUNKIN, of Philadelphia.

COUNTY TICKET.

FOR CONGRESS, J. D. MCJUNKIN, Butler. (Subject to District Conference.) FOR ASSEMBLY, WILLIAM P. BRAHAM, Mercer township, JOSEPH T. DONLY, Butler.

FOR JURY COMMISSIONER, ROBERT MCCLUNG, Fairview township.

We regret to have to omit several matters this week for want of space.

The State ticket nominated by the Independent Republicans of Pennsylvania, will be found this week with the other ticket in the CITIZEN.

All our Republican readers can thus see both State Tickets, and then read, reflect, and vote, as to them seems most right and best.

Mr. HENRY HALL, present editor of the Mercer Dispatch, was one of the Congressional conferees for Mercer county attending here last week.

He is an agreeable gentleman and made a pleasant impression upon all our citizens with whom he came in contact.

H. B. BOWSER, Esq., a prominent young lawyer of Mercer, was also here in company with Mr. Miller and his conferees.

Mr. H. C. BLOSS, the able editor of the Titusville Herald, Crawford county, was also here attending as a conferee of that county, on the part of Dr. Roberts.

Mr. H. C. GRENNER, connected with the same journal, also accompanied the conferees from Crawford.

All the above gentlemen, as well as the candidates, paid our office a welcome and pleasant visit. We hope they may all find future occasions to bring them this way again.

That Assessment Business. The case of Harry Walker, who it is alleged was dismissed as a clerk in the Postoffice here by Miss Robinson, the Postmistress, because of his declining to pay certain political assessments on his salary, seems to require a brief statement of facts, from which all can draw their own conclusions.

These facts are derived from Esquire Lewis P. Walker, the father of Harry, and who authorizes this statement.

Young Walker lately received three different notices of assessments on his salary, which is only $360; two from Philadelphia, from Cooper, Chairman of the Regular Republican State Committee, and one from the Hubbell Committee, at Washington, D. C.

The last one was for $7.50, $1 and $6. The last one from Cooper had on it, in marked red letters, the words, "No. 2." To these notices Harry refused to respond, after consulting with his father and friends. And whether the notice be afterwards received from the Postmistress, that his services in the office would not be needed after first of coming month, had anything to do with his refusal to pay these assessments, will be a question for each one to determine for themselves.

There might be some difficulty in determining this point if it were not for a further fact stated by Esquire Walker, to-wit: that some days ago he was called upon by a Stalwart politician in this place, who informed him that a great pleasure was being brought on Mr. Thomas Robinson, father of the Postmistress, to have Harry removed as clerk in the office.

This Stalwart, Esquire Walker states, also gave it as his opinion that Harry would or ought to be removed. What the motive here was may be judged from the fact that Esquire Walker is an open "Independent" in politics, at present. Whether it was to coerce or silence him, through fear of his losing his office, he has his own opinion. Certain it is that the dismissal of his son comes as such a time as to confirm his opinion as to its real cause. And more certain it is that this assessment business is most disgraceful to any party. The idea of big, able bodied men, traveling around the State and faring sumptuously every day, and all their expenses being paid from money assessed from poor clerks and scrubbing women in the public offices, is one that should be resented at the polls in November next by ever honest voter in this county and in the State.

As Mr. Marshall alluded to this case of Harry Walker in his speech here to the Independents on last Wednesday evening, and as the facts have been denied by correspondents from here to some of the Pittsburgh papers, the above statement is made on authority of Harry's father, and we presume will set at rest all controversy in the matter.

JUDGE JACOB K. BOYD, formerly of this place and now of Kansas, is at present on a visit to his brother here, Mr. Wm. S. Boyd. Judge Boyd studied law here and was admitted to the Bar in the year 1840. After practicing here and in New Castle, in partnership with the late Judge McGuffin, he went west, to Iowa, where he resided until he went to Kansas. In both these States he has held the position of Judge; that in Kansas, which he now holds, being known as Judge of Police Court, in which all criminal business is tried. The old friends here of Mr. Boyd were pleased to see him back to his old home.

Thomas M. Marshall.

There is no use trying to belittle Thomas M. Marshall in Butler county. He came here last week to see his old friends and acquaintances, who are numbered by the thousands. He has been one of the pioneers of every good cause. His was one of the first voices heard against slavery, and in favor of "free men, free speech and free lands." On every question affecting the rights of the great mass of the people he has for years been among the foremost and the bravest. With the courage of a lion he speaks out what he thinks, always following his convictions of duty and of right. In this campaign he believes that "hossism" is the only real issue, and he is going to denounce it until election day. The best thing his opponents can do is to continue their misrepresentations of him, but the people of this county know his power and his worth, and will always turn out to hear him.

Two Meetings.

Two Republican meetings were held in this place last Wednesday night: one in the Court House and the other in the Park in front of the Court House. In regard to the fact of these meetings both being called and held on the same evening, we believe, from all we can learn, that it was accidental. It seems that the friends of each of the Republican State tickets, Independents and Regulars, desired to have the benefit of the County Fair for a meeting; and as Wednesday the 20th, and the second day of the Fair was understood as going to be the day on which the largest number of people would likely be in town, each had made arrangements to have a meeting on the evening of that day. These arrangements once being made could not easily be changed, without disarranging the times at which the State candidates were engaged to speak at other places in the State. Hence both meetings had to go on. So far as we were concerned we would much have preferred if they had been held on different evenings or days. And this we know was the wish of the people generally. Many desired to hear both sets of candidates, which they could not well do on the same evening. However, many did manage to see and to hear some of the remarks of both sets of speakers.

We have not been furnished with the full proceedings of either meeting. The one in the Court House was presided over by Gen. J. N. Purviance, with a number of Vice Presidents, and was addressed by Mr. Brosius, candidate on the Regular ticket for Congressman-at-Large; by Gen. Beaver, candidate on the Regular ticket for Governor, by a Mr. Burr, of Philadelphia, and by Congressman S. H. Miller.

The Independents were presided over by Mr. Josiah R. Spang, member of the Independent State Committee for this county, with a number of Vice Presidents, and was addressed by Col. Levi Bird Duff, of Pittsburgh, Independent candidate for Lieutenant Governor; Col. William McMichael, of Philadelphia, Independent candidate for Congressman-at-Large, and by the Hon. Thomas M. Marshall, of Pittsburgh.

The meetings were both respectable in size. We have seen the Court House much fuller than it was on that evening, although it was well filled; and during the delivery of Mr. Marshall's speech on the outside, there is no denying that there was a large audience listening to him, a larger number in fact than could possibly have been put into the Court room. It was not generally known that he would be present, else we have no doubt many more would have been in from the county to hear him, as he is a general favorite with our people.

Thus Butler had the honor of witnessing what came nearer a "joint discussion," than has happened at any other place so far in this campaign. The people are desirous of hearing all sides and we presume there will be other meetings yet held. At the meetings last Wednesday evening good music was on hands for both sides, the Independents having the benefit of the excellent Germania Cornet Band of this place, and the Regulars the services of a band from Pittsburgh.

The strange mutations of fortune which sometimes overtake men in this changeable world are curiously illustrated in the case of a Dane named Louis Jansen, who was recently arrested in Chicago, charged with selling liquor without license. Jansen is described as a man of commanding presence, and straight as an arrow. Four or five years ago he was chief counsel to the King of Denmark, but for some unknown reason was dismissed from his position, and subsequently came to America in very poor circumstances. He has since been earning a scanty living for himself and family by keeping a saloon in Chicago. It would seem as if a king's counsel could find something better to do than selling liquor without license.

The Third Trial.

The Congressional Conference of this district re-assembled at the Lowry House, in this place, on Thursday evening last. The same gentlemen were present as conferees as at former meetings of the conference, excepting that from Crawford county, Mr. H. C. Bloss, editor of the Titusville Herald, appeared as a conferee in place of one of the former ones of that county. All the three candidates, Dr. Roberts, Mr. Miller and Mr. McJunkin were present. On Thursday evening two ballots were taken, with the same result as on former occasions, each county adhering to its own candidate. An adjournment was then taken for Friday morning, at 9 o'clock, when several more ballots were then cast with same results as formerly. Then another adjournment was had to the afternoon. At the afternoon meeting a proposition was made that the candidates should release their conferees from any personal obligations to them, and that the different conferees should then proceed of them, solves in the effort to effect a nomination. This proposition had been spoken of during the day and was finally agreed to by all the candidates, and the following paper prepared and signed by them, as follows:

LOWRY HOUSE, BUTLER PA., September 22, 1882.

To Messrs. Steeple, Spearman, Walker and others, members of the Republican Conference of the 26th Congressional, Pa. District, Gentlemen: We hereby release you from all personal obligations to ourselves and are willing that you shall proceed to make a nomination, from the candidates now before the conference, which you may consider consistent with the claims of our respective counties and the welfare of the Republican party in the 26th Pa. District. The candidate to be determined upon alone by the conferees now in session. If no nomination be made before the conference might deem it proper to adjourn to some other place the candidates are to be restored to the power and authority now and heretofore reposed in them, and the effect of this paper to cease. The power reserved to any other authority or supposed authority. Each county to cast three votes in the conference at each ballot by the conferees representing each county present at the time.

W. B. ROBERTS, S. H. MILLER, J. D. MCJUNKIN.

Under the above agreement the conferees again assembled on Friday evening and took several ballots, without any conclusion. An adjournment was had to Saturday morning, when they again convened and several more votes were taken, the conferees of each county voting as before. It then having become evident that a nomination was no nearer at hand than before, an adjournment was agreed upon, the conferees to meet in Pittsburgh, at Monongahela House, on Tuesday, Oct. 3d.

GLORIOUS OLD TOM

MAKES HIS DEBUT ON THE INDEPENDENT STUMP AT BUTLER.

A Highly Characteristic Speech Full of Hard Hits, Frozen Facts and Strong Points.

Reported for Pittsburgh Dispatch.

BUTLER, September 20.—With General Beaver addressing a Stalwart meeting in the Court House and Duff, McMichael and "Glorious Old Tom Marshall" talking to an Independent meeting in the Diamond just across the street, Butler had a nearer approach to a joint discussion to-night than General Beaver's modesty has permitted heretofore. A platform was put up in the open air in front of the Court House, and when the speakers were escorted to it by the Butler Brass Band it was surrounded by a large crowd in spite of the threatening rain. The meeting was called to order by J. B. McJunkin, son of Judge McJunkin. J. R. Spang presided, and the chairs on the platform were all filled by Vice Presidents who are well known as Republicans.

OPENED WITH A HURRAH. Colonel Duff was the first speaker. When he came forward he was received with three cheers, loud enough to make the Court House windows jingle. The two meetings were close enough together to allow the cheers of one to echo in the ears of the other, but not so close that the discordant remarks got mixed. Colonel Duff gave his principal attention to what he held to be the vital issue—whether the Republican party should be managed for the good of the country or the country run for the benefit of the party. He explained how Cameron had bought votes for Rawley in the convention, and after arguing the inconsistency of the Stalwart campaign management with the principles of the Republican platform gave place to Colonel McMichael.

Mr. McMichael spoke very briefly, making his strongest point in the Hubbell assessments, citing the instance of a little boy in the Government service, so poor that his clothing was given him by charity, yet he was assessed $3 to help elect Beaver. His speech was loudly cheered, but there was a manifest impatience to hear Marshall. There were frequent calls for him, and when his tall form appeared upon the platform, as he stood and slowly took off his overcoat with a businesslike air, he was greeted first as plain Tom Marshall. Then three and a tiger for the old war-horse.

He said he had come up to open the Republican campaign in Butler county because it was the home of his boy-hood; the county into which his father had brought wife, his 11 children, and his hot-chest, away back in eighteen and twenty something. The people here knew he had always been a Republican; he was a Republican before General Beaver was born, and nobody new it better than the people of Butler county. Sixty years ago when he knelt with his 10 older brothers and sisters while his pioneer father prayed, he had morning and evening heard a petition offered up that the shikies might be stricken from the slave and all men made equal before the law. Upon that platform he was here to speak to-night, because there are more WHITE SLAVES in this country to-day than there ever were negroes in Maryland. For a recent instance he detailed his experience at the Harrisburg Convention, where he was elected a delegate for Major Brown, another Butler county boy. He found that Brown had an honest majority of the convention, but the first day in Harrisburg he met a long, tall man with red hair, one J. D. Cameron. This red-haired man said to him, "I can tell you who will be Supreme Judge." "Who?" "Havley. I promised it to him last winter, and I will get it." "Look into your hearts," thundered the orator; "question your manhood, men of Butler county, and say if any red-headed dictator shall give away your votes before you cast them." Continuing, Mr. Marshall detailed how a great big man of 220 pounds weight came to him and said: "I am a delegate from W. Brown, and I do anything for you? I owe you a great deal." Mr. Marshall recognized him as an old client, and said: "Yes, you owe me money and you owe me gratitude. I saved your nephew from the penitentiary when he was indicted for robbing the postoffice. My nephew is a candidate for Supreme Judge. If you are pledged to no other vote for him," the man promised he would, and was enthusiastic for Brown until Cooper caught him and took him up to Don Cameron's room. In the convention he voted for Rawley, and on the first list of appointments in the Pension Department after the convention appeared the name of D. N. E. Matthewson, the delegate from Wyoming, for an office of $1,000 a year, his appointment being made at Don Cameron's solicitation.

SOME FROZEN FACTS.

He disclaimed any intention to say an unkind word of General Beaver. He was a brave soldier of the Republic and had lost a leg in its service, but he had said in his letter declining the nomination for Congressman-at-Large: "If you live up to your platform, you should succeed; if you betray it, you should perish." He was here to-night to say that they had broken every plank in it, and were no longer deserving the support of men who believe in its principles. He instanced the removal of Collector Sullivan, whom Carl Schurz had characterized as the best collector in the service of the United States. Five years ago, he said, Cameron had demanded Sullivan's removal to make a place for Thomas Robinson, of Butler. Greer had notified Sullivan to resign, but Hayes would not remove him. Garfield came next, and he, hearing that Sullivan was an honest man, refused to remove him. Then, under the providence of God, but by the instigation of the devil Chester A. Arthur became President. He heard Sullivan wasn't for Cameron and off came his head. So much for the civil service, and so much for the compulsory assessments. Harry Walker, a clerk in the Butler postoffice, received three separate notices from Chairman Cooper demanding 2 per cent. of his salary to help elect Beaver. He paid no attention to them. To-day he received a notice that his services were no longer required by the United States.

Would anyone vote for candidates whose campaign expenses were collected by such blackmail? Yet Brosius says the contributions are purely voluntary. "If a man can stand up and say that," said Mr. Marshall, "fills the hole I left in the ticket, God help me, it needed a mighty small plug!"

TO DON, GREETING.

He then detailed how he came to be nominated at Harrisburg, how McMichael had begged him to stand for the sake of whipping Cameron, how Don Cameron had asked him to accept the place. Don Cameron he said, he liked. He had no conscience, but he had courage. He thought he inherited Pennsylvania from his father, an old fox that could never fool a man in the face and do a brave act.

Mr. Marshall concluded with a vindication of his action in opposing the candidates of a convention that was a mere private transaction between himself and General Beaver it might be a different matter; but his vote, the common franchise of American citizens, the right to cast it was given to him as a public trust, and he would die before he forsook to cast it according to his conscience. He took part in the convention, but he was not bound to support a ticket nominated by corruption. Fraud vitiated everything it touched. They need not talk of the punctilio of conventions, when he saw delegates bought and sold like sheep. He took the course his manhood dictated, and asked all honest men to do the same; to carefully weigh the arguments on every side and then vote as their conscience dictates.

At the conclusion of Mr. Marshall's speech the meeting broke up with loud and repeated cheers for Stewart, McMichael, Duff and Marshall.

Mr. Marshall, as the crowd was dispersing, stepped to the front of the platform, and said: "I haven't much law business on hand just now, and I propose to put in every day between now and the 7th of November in helping to clean the Cameron Machine out."
