SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Chronic Diarrhœa, Jaundice, Impurity of the Blood, Fever and Ague, Malaria, and all Diseases caused by Derangement of Liver, Bowels and Kidneys.

SYMPTOMS OF A DISEASED LIVER.

Bad Breath; Pain in the Side, sometimes the pain is felt under the Shoulder-blade, mistaken for Rheumatism; general loss of appetite; Bowels generally costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, is dull and heavy, with considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of leaving undone something which ought to have been done; a slight, dry cough and flushed face is sometimes an attendant, often mistaken for consumption; the patient complains of weariness and debility; nervous, easily startled; feet cold or burning, sometimes a prickly sensation of the skin exists; spirits are low and despondent; and, although satisfied that exercise would be beneficial, yet one can hardly summon up fortitude to try it—in fact, distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred when but few of them existed, yet examination after death has shown the Liver to have been extensively deranged.

It should be used by all persons, old and young, whenever any of the above symptoms appear.

Persons Traveling or Living in Unhealthy Localities, by taking a dose occasionally to keep the Liver in healthy action, will avoid all Malaria, Bilious attacks, Dizziness, Nausea, Dromess, Depression of Spirits, etc. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage.

If You have eaten anything hard of digestion, or feel heavy after meals, or sleepless at night, take a dose and you will be relieved.

Time and Doctors' Bills will be saved by always keeping the Regulator in the House!

For, whatever the ailment may be, a thoroughly safe purgative, alterative and tonic can never be out of place. The remedy is harmless and does not interfere with business or pleasure.

IT IS PURELY VEGETABLE,

And has all the power and efficacy of Calomel or Quinine, without any of the injurious after effects.

A Governor's Testimony.

Simmons Liver Regulator has been in use in my family for some time, and I am satisfied it is a valuable addition to the medical science.

J. GILL SHORTER, Governor of Ala.

Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, of Ga., says: Have derived some benefit from the use of Simmons Liver Regulator, and wish to give it a further trial.

"The only Thing that never fails to Relieve."—I have used many remedies for Dyspepsia, Liver Affection and Debility, but never have found anything to benefit me to the extent Simmons Liver Regulator has. I sent from Minnesota to Georgia for it, and would send further for such a medicine, and would advise all who are similarly affected to give it a trial as it seems the only thing that never fails to relieve.

P. M. JANNEY, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. T. W. Mason says: From actual experience in the use of Simmons Liver Regulator in my practice I have been and am satisfied to use and prescribe it as a purgative medicine.

gor N. Fremont St., Baltimore

During the war I was injured in the stomach by a piece of a shell, and have suffered from it ever since. About four years ago it brought on paralysis, which kept me in bed six months, and the best doctors in the city said I could not live. I suffered fearfully from indigestion, and for over two years could not eat solid food and for a large portion of the time was unable to retain even liquid nourishment. I tried Brown's Iron Bitters and now after taking two bottles I am able to get up and go around and am rapidly improving.

The Singular Vote of Aut Tilbox.

"He was again rescued by Hec and Marl, and lead tremblin'ly from iysters to cider, and from cider back ag'in to iysters; but it begun to be everdent that his capacity was well-nigh reached. His elerquence was gone. He set harmlessly down on the hearth of the box-stove, which fortinitly contained no fire, and refused every inclernation to move. But when Marl whispered to him once more the accustomed invertation, a dangerous gleam shot from his closin' eyes: 'Young man,' says he, 'there is but one word left that I can hear, and that word is not a pleasant word, and that word is iysters and cider, and woe be to him that speaks it!' And he riz up, and leanin' on the shoulder of his compatterots, disappeared temperrarily from the scene.

'It bein' now somewhat advanced in the afternoon, a suggestion was made that we should perceed at once to the polls. But the brotherly feelin' which always annermated the voters of Amity, as I have said, gentlemen, has never permitted the castin' of a hurried and onpermeditated vote. I fear, however, that Williamston had been indulgin' somewhat too freely in the cider of the Dimmocracy, when, after some differculty, he succeeded at length in reachin' the chair, and pounded an entirely onnecessary length of time on the counter perlimenary to introducin' a bill. His tones, which at first was husky, grew clear and loud as he perceeded.

'I move,' says he, 'that an injunction be put upon the publercation, cirkerlation, or pursuin' of any almanick save and exceptin' Robert B. Thomas's old-fashioned, old farmer's yallar-covered, ten-cent almanick! Gentlemen', says he, 'I was induced last year to accept another almanick as a gift from an acquaintance. I took it home to my family as a instructor and a guide. Gentlemen, that almanick was the work of an incendenderrary and a fiend. My wife and me was made to go to church on Saturday, and wondered to find the doors of the sanctooary closed ag'in us We was made the scandal of our neighbors by washin' on Sunday, and bakin' in the middle of the week. Gentlemen, the moon in that almanick was seen at first quarter in perigee in the mornin', and fulled in apogee before night, besides bein' represented of a shape to draw tears from the eyes of science. December was sct down as showery and January without a thaw. Moreover, in the back part of the almanick was receipts, among which was given one removin' stains from the mouth after eatin' huckleberry pie. My wife and me innercently applied the mixter. Gentlemen, for days we was in torments, and our blistered burnin' mouths was closed to our family and friends. Gentlemen, shall not sech dastardly and inhuman perceedin's be stopped?' Here Williamston sunk exhausted into his chair, and the motion was put and carried by an overwhelmin' majority.

'Scarcely had Williamston been removed ere a member of our own party was brought triumphently forrered by his compatterots and set upon the chair. His emotions was sech that that the ruler sank lifeless from his hands, and it was some time before he could perceed. He begun in a fur-away dyin' tone that graduerly burst into a voice of thunder.

'I am tired,' says he, of party strife and perlitical intrigues. I am sick of campaigns and nommernations and 'lections and caukerses. I want to settle it once and forever by nommernatin' a good hereddertary king. And I hereby move and nommernate that Colonel Sonorous B. Bacon be app'inted hereditary king?'

There is no knowin, what action might have been took in regard to my rash though well-meanin' constituent, had not our attention been diverted by the fact that the voters of the town of Amity was suddenly seen in a body wendin, their way towards the Deep Gulley and Loud Western railroad tracks, which tracks, gentlemen run parallel with each other through the sand-gap, at a distance of some three or four rods from the Amity Town-hall. Soon I perceived that I was standin' alone by the deserted polls, and I turned and followed my compatterots to learn what might be the cause of this singerler conduct

Gentlemen, I have already narrated to you more than was my intention of the brotherly feelin', the friendly and am'able perceedin's, which was carried on in our little town of Amity durin' this important occasion, but I think I should fail in my dooty if I neglected to say that, as I j'ined my companions in the gap, it was everdent that the bettin' had been high and the stakes was about equal. For I beheld Jones settin' with his hoss and buggy on the Deep Gully railroad track, calmly awaitin' the arival of the Loud Western train, with which, yes, gentlemen, with which it was his intention to run parallel in a race through the gap!

'As I gazed upon Jones, I cannot describe to you the emotions which temperrarily overcome me. I had expected much of my constituents, but I was not prepared for sech a display patterotism as this. I was about to rush forrered to assure him that this was unecessary, when the roar of the approachin' train was heard, and calmly waitin' to git abreast of the Loud Western engine, Jones loosened the reins on his palpertatin' steed, and disappeared like a met'or up the track.

"Gentlemen, I have heard it said that there is a singerlarity about the hosses and waggins of the voters of Amity which would cause them to be easily distinguished anywheres on the face of the globe. And I will not deny that the back of the seat of Jones's buggy was formed of a mahogony pew door procured from the ruins of the old Presbyterian church, and upon which the figger 6, representin' the number of the pew to its former occupants, was still strikin'ly visible. Moreover, Jones's wife, bein' of an astheticky nature, has tacked around the ramparts of the buggy consid'rable of the old pulpit fringe, simarlarly procured from the ruins.

But now, gentlemen, as I watched that figger 6 disappearin' up the track in a wavin' sea of fringe, and heard the clatterin' of Jones's hoss and buggy risin' even above the roar of engine all lesser emotions was forgotten. I was compelled to lean upon a neighbor for support. But when the breathless excitement had passed away, and it was announced, by sech as had stationed themselves to the termination of the gap, a tie, perlitical issoos was for the moment swallowed up in our mutual despair. We grasped each other's hands in silence, and I don't believe, no, gentlemen, I don't believe there was a dry eye amongst the voters of the town of Amity. But the sun was fast westerin'. The polls was about to close. Realizin' this fact, the voters of Amity rushed permisc'ously toward the Town-hall. Leavin' our valiernt constituents to defend for a moment our interest at the polls, Hec and I sped to the hoss-sheds, where Aut Tilbox was still loudly, sweetly sleepin'. We spoke to Aut in gentle entertainin' accents, but he answered not. We shook and we threatened him, but the sound of his resoundin' slumbers was the only reply borne to our waitin' ears. There was a desparing gleam in Hec's eye, and then onaccountable flash of trierumph. In less time than the words leaves my mouth, Hec was exchangin' clo's with the unconscious Aut Heights was equally tall, and corperlancy was supplied by means of a half sheaf of straw procured from a neighborin' waggin, and which was stuffed under the perdigious waistcoat Hec had now assumed. There was but one thing wantin': Aut's beard was of a peculiar yallowish tinge, growin' in perfusiou from under his chin, his face bein' otherwise smooth. Hec's lightnin' eye fell upon the tail of Jedge Marlborough's hoss, standin' near. Yes, gentlemen, there was no denyin', that beard and that hoss's tail was of the same onnatural color. Gentlemen, it was no sooner said than done! Marlborough's hoss stood without a tail—that is, gentlemen, without no tail to speak on. But a differculty arose on account of Hec's mustache: 'I half anticerpated this,' says he, and groanin' drew a razor from his pocket. 'It's all for Fairblow,' says he. And 'It'll grow ag'in,' says he; and without another word that beautiful curvin' mustache fell to the earth. By means of some pine pitch the tail of Jedge Marlborough's hoss was quickly adjusted under the chin of my youthful constituent; and then assumin' Aut's beaver hat as a last tetch, and thrustin' one arm akimbo, and steppen' out with that peculiar tread for which Aut [illegible] distinguished, and which I cannot describe to you, gentlemen, as [illegible] of a hop and skip, as though [illegible] a-keepin' time to the inspera[illegible] invisible music, Hec wended [illegible] doward the Town-hall.

Gentlemen, sech was my e[illegible] that I set weakly down on the [illegible] rail, and if my life had been t[illegible] at stake, for some moments [illegible] not have riz. Positively, ge[illegible] I could not have riz. Gent[illegible] the actual Aut Tilbox had r[illegible] take his place by the side o[illegible] would not have been believed [illegible] identery would have been q[illegible] and he would have been cas[illegible] an impositor. For gentleme[illegible] youthful constituent wended[illegible] and amblin, and corperla[illegible] wards the Town-hall, it co[illegible] denied to my amazed a[illegible] vision that he was the Aut[illegible] Aut Tilbox that ever I see! [illegible] he was Aut Tilboxer than himself!

'So the persumptive for[illegible] tered the Town-hall, and [illegible] wards the polls, and swing[illegible] publican ticket derfiantly [illegible] ped it inter the box; an[illegible] thrustin' to one side the [illegible] exclamations of his disap[illegible] patterots, he was permitt[illegible] citement of the moment [illegible] unfollered from the scene

'Five minutes afterwa[illegible] a-standin' with Hec, re[illegible] his own clo's, the loss of [illegible] and a little griminess u[illegible] not bein' at sech a time n[illegible] of, I was declared To[illegible] Reegistrar of the town [illegible] majority, gentlemen—b[illegible] one!

'I will not linger l[illegible] scenes which happened [illegible] this eventful day. Se[illegible] that when Jedge Mar[illegible] was brought around [illegible] stood discoursin' loudly [illegible] hall steps after the e[illegible] observed the situation [illegible] tail, his language was [illegible] hesertate, gentlemen, [illegible] this narration. 'Any[illegible] Marlborough, in res[illegible] 'anybody that 'l' disfi[illegible] late the tail of a noble[illegible] is not worthy of the n[illegible] racy!' And the co[illegible] language was simply [illegible] sumever, as I wended[illegible] wards that evenin' n[illegible] gratefulness and peac[illegible] be disturbed even by [illegible] stittuents of Jedge [illegible] burnin' me in effergy[illegible] der of the Hornpike

'And on the follo[illegible] men, Fairblow Ba[illegible] Aspinwall was j'ined [illegible] rimony, to the reside[illegible] parents. The incerde[illegible] was forgotten. The v[illegible] of Amity, with their [illegible] festive to my house, ir[illegible] litical differences. I[illegible] Waters's eyes was te[illegible] tied the knot, gentleme[illegible] sider it a thing to be [illegible] mented on. And ea[illegible] hands with Marl Junior, who stood somewhat pale in a corner, 'Marl,' says I, 'I wish that I had another darter like Fairblow for you, I do indeed.' 'Colonel,' says Marl, 'I wish you had, but that would be ompossible.'

'Fairblow and Hec have lived most happy together. Their house is, perhaps with one exception, the finest residence in Amity, bein' pleasantly surrounded by piazzers, a fountain, and a cowpello, and, two weeks ago, an infant cherrib, which bears, gentlemen, the name of Sonorous Bacon Aspinwall.

'But some days after the 'lection Aut Tilbox was struttin' around, in his proud and corperlant way, makin' his boast of bein' diserfected with all existin' polertics, and of not havin' cast his vote for no party. On bein' overwhelmin'ly informed by the Dimmocracy that he had been seen on the prev'ous election to cast his vote for the Republican canderdate, his denial and indignation knew no bounds. 'Then I was dragged into it when I was onsensible,' says he. 'It was intimerdation! It was intimerdation at the polls!' he cries. 'No,' says they; 'you walked in onassisted and of your own accord; and, more than that, Aut,' says they, 'you made a boast and a spectacle of it. You swung your Rerpublican ticket derfiantly in the air, Aut, and then dropped it into the box.' The number of witnesses was overwhelmin'. A sad and bedizzened look crept over Aut's face. He give them one last beseechin' gaze, and then turned and walked sorrerfully away.

'Gentlemen, it is safe to say that from that hour Aut Tilbox was a changed man. 'What is this mystery in science or in natur',' I have heard him say, 'that a man may, onknowin' to himself, commit sech desprit and onnatural deeds? It is solemn and myster'ous, and it bids us pause.' And Aut has forsook the ondue use of cider, and may be seen—yes, gentlemen, he may be seen on any Sunday, arrayed in his 'lection suit and beaver hat, quietly wendin' his way with Mrs. Tilbox down towards the Methodist meetin'-house.'

Colonel Sonorous B. Bacon paused. Listening with rapt attention to his narrative, I had long been struggling with the fatal impulse to sneeze. This desire, together with the thrilling close of the Colonel's recital, at length proved irresistible. Assuming, as my last resort in this extremity, an air of meek abstraction, I cautiously sought for my pocket-handkerchief. But the Colonel detected the movement. A slow and bitter smile, in which there was more than usual of withering contempt, overspread his features. Lifting his thumb and forefinger to his nose, he gave utterance to a blast which startled his audience from their seats, and shook the dishes upon the grocery shelves. When the surcharged atmosphere had cleared a space, the Colonel sat calmly majestic in his chair, while I observed that [illegible] fastened [illegible]

The Dignity of the Hat.

The dignity and importance of the hat have never been fully appreciated. The fact that a man may change the style of his hat a dozen times with the same suit of clothes tends to show that the covering for the head is treated with less respect than the covering for any other part of the body. There is no apparent reason for this. The fact that a hat, while new, is the favorite article of dress to be bandied about among people who recklessly bet on State elections and horse races does not excuse the disrespect attached to the same hat in the early morning succeeding election. It has long been a matter of regret that such an innocent and inoffensive article of dress should be subjected to the indignity of promiscuous betting.

It is gratifying to see that attempts have been made to give the hat its true dignity. Out in the barbaric wilds of New Mexico a few days ago one Lynch shot and mortally wounded a gambler in defence of the dignity of the wide sombrero. The details of the affair are unknown, but it is supposed that a dispute arose concerning the latest style of hat. The gambler probably insinuated that Lynch's hat was too large for an ordinary umbrella and too small for a circus tent, or the gambler may have expressed surprise that the braid on the outer edge of Lynch's hat should be eight inches wider than a true appreciation of art would suggest. However this may be, the dignity of the sombrero was fully sustained and the wild West is satisfied.

This method may meet the approval of Mexicans, to whom the width of a hat-rim is almost as much as a religion, but in the East the dignity of the hat must be upheld by a special act of some legislative body. A young Philadelphian has partly solved the problem. Some time ago a veteran broker in New York sat down upon the young man's hat. There is no evidence to show that the veteran committed this crime deliberately or maliciously. But the young man was so wrought upon that he immediately entered suit against the broker for damages and refused to be comforted. The young man may have many good reasons for his action. The hat may have been a new hat; it may have been an only hat, or it may have been the gift of admiring friends.

How a lawsuit can heal a broken hat does not seem quite clear, but as the young man's heart and whole existence centred in the well-being of his hat the law may do a great deal of good. If the broker had sat down upon the young man, all this trouble might have been averted. As it is, the country will wait breathlessly until the case-hardened broker is sent to Sing Sing for life. The dignity of the hat, and especially the Philadelphia hat, must be respected.—Times.

"Fox's Book of Martyrs"

Contains the history and pictures of hundreds of people who were stoned, burned, beaten, pulled to pieces and tortured on account of their conscientious convictions as to belief and duty. They suffered incredible torment and have come down to the present age as martyrs. It is not now customary to torture people thus, but they are made martyrs by rheumatism until they suffer almost as much as did the heroes of the martyr ages. There was no relief for the old-time martyrs, but there is happy relief for those who suffer from rheumatism. Cashier Charles F. Morrill, of Manchester, N. H., suffered terribly from frequent attacks of this disease, but he has been cured. He writes: "I was a martyr to rheumatism, and, although I tried many other remedies, I found nothing that relieved me like Perry Davis's Pain Killer." Other rheumatic martyrs may wisely take the hint.

As evidence that Foord's Tonic Cordial is just as efficacious now as it was forty years ago, read the following letters:—

Americus Bell, of Matawan, N. J., Sept. 19, 1881, says: "It affords me pleasure to recommend Dr. Foord's Tonic Cordial. I have used it with greater satisfaction than any like preparation I have ever tried."

E. T. Goodall, East New York, L. I., April 5, 1882, says: I regard Foord's Tonic Cordial by far the most efficacious remedy for Diarrhœa and Cholera. It has acted on me as no other remedy ever has, and I would not be without a bottle in the house under any circumstances.

W. J. Latha, of University Station, N. C, says I have used Edey's Carbolic Troches for the sore throat with the most satisfactory results.

Baby Elephant.

Barnum is overjoyed with his acquisition—the baby elephant—and declares $300,000 could not buy it. He offers $52,000 for an insurance of the life of the infant for 52 weeks, Surely, if he knew the full value of Peruna and Manalin, he would do no such foolish thing, as they are the most successful protective medicines that have ever been introduced to the human family. No one can take any disease while taking Peruna before each meal, and keeping the bowels regular with Manalin. Ask your Druggist for the book on the "Ills of Life."

A London paper announces the birth of "three young children." This is not quite so bad as the action of a newspaper, published not far from Boston, whose editor, having been informed by a joker that a singular phenomenon had been noticed in a neighboring town in the shape of a baby who had been born without teeth, at once sent out a reporter to investigate the case and write a paragraph th
