-The panic in the oil market last week is said to have been brought about by Vandergrift, the President of the United Pipe Line Co., who went around to the different bank presidents in Pittsburgh offering notes of the company for large amounts, at a discount, with the intention of shaking faith in the Co. —Mr. Harvey A. Stephenson of Allegheny city, a son of James Stephenson of Bonnie Brook this county, has brought suit against Bryce & Jones for maintaining at their works on Sherman Avenue, a tilt-hammer nuisance. It appears that the firm is about substituting the present tilt-hammer with a much larger one, and as the present appliance, as operated, works serious discomfort to all living within squares of it, it is feared that the new and bigger one will make it intolerable for the residents to endure any longer. The uniform testimony of the witnesses is that the noise and jarring of the houses produced by the tilt-hammer is of such a character as to prevent sleep and is a constant source of discomfort. The trial is going on before Alderman Edgar, and Stephenson is upheld in his action by the whole neighborhood.

-The decline of crude petroleum —The deeline of crude petroleum within the past few days is attributed largely to overtrading; but there are other factors of more importance even than excessive speculation. Oil exchanges are practically run by agents of the Standard Oil Company, and the business of fleecing the lambs this fall has been unusually profitable. In a few weeks oil will advance again with a bound, more victims will be drawn in, to be squeezed dry by another decline like that of the past few days. Men are prone to risk their savings in speculation, and can be with difficulty dissuaded from venturesome investments; but dealing in crude oil does not come within those limitations which are set to all commercial risks. It is rather like stacking up chips against a brace faro game. In addition there is the almost irresistible tempation to throw good money after bad. Don't speculate; but if you will, at least satisfile tempation to throw good money after bad. Don't speculate; but if you will, at leas don't speculate in oil.—Philadelphia Record.

Notes on Current Events.

The accident on the Panhandle must stand as the most remarkable on record. It is not every train that can be trained to tumble about as did the one in question without hurting somebody or Butler. itself more seriously.

There is an unexpected hitch in the movement for dispensing with the services of puddlers in the manufacture of nail iron. The Wheeling syndicate began experiments at the Riverside Mills on Tuesday in heating Bessemer steel in an ordinary furnace. Two heats were made, but in each instance the steel was burned up. The capitalists interested in the experiment are much chagrined, but they insist that what has been done can be done, and they will keep on trying.

The Ways and Means Committee of the House have already had a meeting. They all agree that the internal revenue should be reduced, with a difference of opinion as to the amount of the reduc tion. As to tariff, the members of the Ways and Means Committee appear to be much like other people—no two think exactly alike. The only thing the committee can agree upon is that they had better wait for the report of the Tariff Commission before seriously taking up the question. The Pittsburgh iron and steel men have been generally interviewed as to the condition of the iron and steel trade, and they are unanimous in saying that they must have lower ore and cheader labor while present quotations govern the trade. A leading ore dealer of Pittsburgh said the ore dealers have agreed to furnish cheaper ore next year, and Mr. Jarrett, of the Amalgamated Association, said that when re duction of wages became a necessity the Amalgamated men would gracefully submit to any reasonable pruning

A Train's Tumble. COLUMBUS, Nov. 22 .- A frightful accident occurred on the Panhandle Railroad, twenty-six miles east of this city, and near Union Station, last night. The New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and Pittsburgh express which left Columbus at 12:12 A. M. was thrown twenty-five feet down an embankment by an obstruction placed upon the track with the evident intention of causing a wreck. The obstacle consisted of an iron rail which had been securely fastened across the track, but by whom or with what object in view is not known. When the news of the accident reached this city it occassioned no little excitement and alarm, as it was reported that there had been considerable loss of life. A special train containing surgeons, rail-road officials and members of the press was at once dispatched to the scene o the disaster, when it was discovered that while the train was almost a total wreck and a majority of the passengers had suffered from cuts and bruises none had been killed, or so far as known fatally wounded The place of the accident is at a heavy embankment. The rail seems to have been laid diagonally across the track, as the two indentures in it that were caused by the wheels striking it were a little farther apart than the width of our gauge.

The engine rolled down the embankment some thirty feet, turned over and clear around so that it headed westward. The first postal landed bottom side up. The second was on its side cars were badly off the track and slightly damaged but did not go down the

There were from forty to sixty pass-engers on the train, and not one seriously hurt. The engineer, in spite of his wrecked locomotive, stood at his post and was not scratched. The passengers gathered in knots, cut down brush and shrubbery, and made fires to keep warm. The four injured men were properly cared for. The track was badly damaged for about 100 feet. The Cashmeres Black and Colored—the damage will be about $10,000.

In view of the hair-breadth escapes it is, perhaps, the most remarkable accident on record.

Mt, Chestnut and White Oak

These are the names respectfully of the two branches of Rev. T. Young's charge in the Presbytery of Butler. Both are in a vigorous, healthy state. At the communion at Mt, Chestnut, on the third Sunday of October, there was addition of seven, all by profession. Rev. James A. Clark assisted, and of course preached an excellent sermon. The ladies have organized a missionary society with a large membership. The trustees report the congregation in a good condition financially. At White Oak Springs, also, there was an encouraging accession—five. The L. M. S. of this congregation is earnest and doing good work. The Sabbath-school is also flourishing.—United Presbyterian.
