THE Pittsburgh Dispatch gave all its numerous readers here an agreeable surprise last week, on its appearing in such a new array of dress. The improvement in the Dispatch is very marked and its owners and friends have cause for congratulation. Their enterprise is bound to bring still further APPORTIONMENT bills still drag along in the Legislature. Senator Stewart, we see, comes to the rescue with a compromise bill, on Congressional districts, that may meet with the approval of a majority of each House. It joins Butler county with those of Armstrong and Indiana for a district. This is the same as some former bills, and while never very popular here with either party, yet it is far more "compact and contiguous territory," than the proposed saddle-bag's arrangement with Washington county. Whether any bill as to districts for Congress will pass is yet doubtful. As to Judicial districts, we still think a bill will pass and that our county will be a separate judicial district, as she clearly is entitled to be. A bill arranging the Senate and Assembly districts will also likely get through.
