

BUTLER CITIZEN. MISCELLANEOUS. June Insects to be Looked After

BY H. REYNOLDS, M. D. There are several insects which need looking after during June. Insects have become so numerous and destructive that unless special pains are taken to destroy them much injury will be inflicted upon the orchard, garden and farm.

THE CODLING-MOTH. The codling-moth is the most destructive insect that the apple-raiser has to contend with, so far as his fruit crop is concerned. In many sections of the country the larvae of the codling-moth render one-half or more of the fruit of the apple orchard worthless.
