The Master Blacksmith.

BY JOHN N. DICKEY.

You would never have imagined it from the look of his lips. They were an ordinary pair indeed when in repose...

"What do I mean?" replied his master, with a loud laugh. "Why, just what I've said of course. What have I been doing that makes you so angry?"

"You're not a blacksmith, boy; but still I might say, in a fatherly kind of way, that you're getting just a little too smart for a cub."

"Too smart for a cub? What do you mean, sir?" cried our hero, with a flushed face.

"What do I mean?" replied his master, with a loud laugh. "Why, just what I've said of course. What have I been doing that makes you so angry?"

"You're not a blacksmith, boy; but still I might say, in a fatherly kind of way, that you're getting just a little too smart for a cub."

"Too smart for a cub? What do you mean, sir?" cried our hero, with a flushed face.

Where'd I have been today if I had started out by putting on airs and getting above my business?

"I'd have been in the same old place as now, sir, and I guess I'll be on time after this," as he took a shovelful of coals from his master's forge to light his pipe.

"No excuse needed in a case like this," replied the blacksmith, slowly. "No fault to find with you on that score, Jerry."

"Any fault to find anywhere, sir?" queried his apprentice, the roar from the furnace almost drowning his voice.

"Not generally, not 'ticularly, boy; but still I might say, in a fatherly kind of way, that you're getting just a little too smart for a cub."

"Too smart for a cub? What do you mean, sir?" cried our hero, with a flushed face.

A Description of the Prison Site as it Appears To-Day.

It will be remembered that the site of the prison was a couple of side hills sloping gently down toward each other into a bog or swamp...

The highest ambition of a Chinese gentleman is to have a nice coffin and a fine funeral.

They feed their friends sumptuously when dead, but let them take care of themselves the best they could while living.

Old women instead of the young are to have a nice coffin and a fine funeral.

The highest recommendation of a young man can have is the fact of his having a wife.

A bachelor is likened to a counterfeiter; he is looked upon with suspicion by members of his own household.

Love making is only done three days after marriage. It is not only considered the safest way to get ahead of a rival, but the surest way to get a wife without losing much time.

A previous acquaintance between the male and female prevents them from marriage.

A man seldom weds a girl of his own town; they are likewise prevented from marrying by namesakes.

Daughters depend upon their husbands for fame and fortune, while sons depend upon their parents and their fathers.

A man could borrow money on the strength of his having a son, but not one would advance him a cent if he had a dozen daughters.

Men wear long petticoats and carry fans while women wear short jackets and carry caudles.

Boats are drawn by horses, carried on rollers by oxen, and pulled by men.

Old men play ball and fly kites, while children fold their hands and look on.

Schoolmasters have more power over the young than parents.

Parents and spectators instead of the children are held responsible for crimes committed by the latter.

It is a less meritorious crime to steal from one's neighbor than to steal from one's father.

When a Chinaman expects a visitor to dine with him he does not ask him to do so, but when he does not wish him to stay he puts the question, "Oh, please stay and dine with me!"

A rich man's servant gets no salary, yet many applicants; while big salaries are paid to the servants of the common people but few make applications.
