Memorial Day.

The twentieth anniversary of Decoration Day has come and gone. The custom originated with the late and lamented Gen. John A. Logan, and steadily grew in popularity, until it became a legal holiday. Wednesday was a beautiful day—not too hot, not too cold, with neither dust, mud, nor rain—and the fine weather combined with an unusually complete programme brought people to Butler from all parts of the county.

The first event of the day was the presentation of the banner given by the Reed brothers of Pittsburg to the G. A. R. Post here which is named after their brother, A. C. Reed, who was mortally wounded at Fredericksburg, and who died a few days after. Col. Thompson made the presentation speech, and it was as patriotic, poetical and pathetic an address as any one could wish to hear. Captain Alexander Reed received the banner and in behalf of the Post made a very good response.

This took place in front of the Court House, and then the procession consisting of the two bands, the G. A. R. Post, the Militia Company, the Soldiers' orphans, the Odd Fellows Lodge, and the Springdale Hose Co., led by Major Reed and Judge Story on horse back, formed and marched to the North Cemetery. Here the soldiers' graves were decorated, and then the soldiers assembled and listened to the usual services.

Capt. Fleeger was the orator of the day, and he made a splendid address on the duties of the day, and mentioned by name the names of the fallen heroes. He said Gen. John A. Logan a beautiful and just tribute.

The procession again formed and wended its way down the hill, and as nearly everybody was thirsty, the three tubs full of lemonade for the ladies of the W.C.T.U. had supplied were soon disposed of.

Decorations day is steadily increasing in popularity, and there are good reasons why it should, and why we should continue to render it the respect of those who risked, and who gave up their lives that the Union should be preserved.

Every year of our continued prosperity as a Nation, renews our appreciation of the services rendered by the soldiers of 1861-5. It brings before our minds the terrible consequences that would have resulted from a failure of those armies to conquer the Southern hosts.
