REV. URIAH XERXES BUTTLES, D D Mrs. Buttles frequently tells me I am an old fogy. I think myself I am somewhat conservative, and it is pro-bable that Houenbury training intensified my peculiarities. Honeybury University is not to put too fine a point upon it, slow. But if the reformers had the control of this world, I for one should not like to live in it. I hold with all humility that men of my stamp have been the salt of the earth

Mrs. Buttles nee Mary Jane Bobbs. on the contrary, goes in for new things. After house-cleaning she generally puts the rocking-chairs in new places, and for three moths or more I have bruised shins. This craving for the new is ingrained in ber mind, and she is therefore ready to see everything in new relations Within the last ten years she has be come a believer, and, in a limited way, an advocate of female rights which in extent, variety and Far be it from me to intimate that ceasful results is equaled by few she has neglected any of the duties that I have a right to expect from ber. And up to date, I have nevbeen able to see that females have

> Mrs. Buttles objects to be called a purity of it, While it is best to have female. But this is one of the things I shall not give up. She is a female, and I have given up enough. She also objects to talk about female rights being called clamor. When I ritisized a female lecturer, she said barsh treatment, nor should they evthe lady had a better voice than I bave, and that in general her utterances are better worth listening to Fortunately the church at Griggs-ville thinks differently. Moreover, a man has a right to use what definitions he pleases. Now, as I under-stand them, the questions over which clamor is made, are: higher education for females; the right of females to choose their work like men; the right to females to the ballot; the right of females to an unlimited pursuit of happiness (vide the constitution of our

> Every man knows the sphere women. It was defined in the garden before our first parents moved in to the world. Now in what way or ways Latin, Greek, and higher math ematics, would make females more seful to men, I do not perceive. Knowledge of this sort might, on the ontrary, make them more trouble They would be more inclined han they are now to ask -questions, and more set in their opinions They would compel a man to keep himself always to mark, and a man feels the need of mental ease, at home at least. Then, too, would these super-educated females be willing to cook? his days frying, broiling, and baking for his board and clothes for a man who earned say a thousand dollars a year. Aside from its giving females a training unsuited to her powers, higher education might make them less attractive to men, as well as less valuable as wives. The question is not what women want, but what men need So, if as helpers of men, women would be more useful if they chose the manner and place of their activity, I snould not abject. But when they go to el bowing men out of the best places and good incomes, they should be reminded of what they were created for Now there is Miss Harbottle, before whose door hangs a tin sign, tor all the world just like Dr. Blink er's, "Dr. Alice Harbottle." She rides about in a smart chaise, after a smart horse, and has an income that would support a man. What inducement has she to marry? None, unless an extraordinary man should come along, and that will never happen bere in Griggsville.

The last time Mrs. Buttles was ill she sent for Dr. Alice.

"I object to it," I said, when that female had departed. "Had she come to nurse you, to prepare delicacies for your palate, or to press upon your palate, or to press upon your brow the tender palm of sympathy, she would have been in her sphere; but,"—"I will not have Dr. Blinker," said Mary Jane with great obstinancy. "He would give me a blue pill, and four horrors of pills he makes himself. If I cannot have Dr. Harbettle I will have been in the state of the nearest blacksmith shop the other day to have the makes himself. If I cannot have been in the state of the nearest blacksmith shop the other day to have the state of the wall appen which were have Dr. Harbottle I will have nobody."

"But," I reasoned, "if Miss Harbottle is going to doctor, she may have to cut off a man's leg."

"What of it!" said Mrs. B.
"What of it!" My ears shuddered When I had my last bilious attack Mrs. Buttles surreptitiously consulted Dr. H. The result was I was kept on a light diet, and was given a dose of rhubarb. Dr. Blinker, who understands my habit perfectly, always gives me what he calls a "course of medicine," on such occasions, and after the conflict is over, I feel that something has been accomplished. Rhubarb, indeed, I need bracing food. This world will be a fice place to dwell in when the sex that can sup port its activities upon weak tes nd bread and butter, has control.

Bismarck's Views on Protec-

This is the way Bismarck views the American system of Protection: The success of the United States in material development is the most illustrious of modern time. The American nation has not only successfully borne and suppressed the most gigantic and expensive war of all history, but immediately afterward disbanded its army, found employment for all its soldiers and marines, paid off most of its debt, given labor and bomes to all the unemployed of Europe as fast as they could arrive within its territory, and still by a system of taxation so indirect as not be perceived, much less felt. Because it is my deliberate judgment that the prosperity of America is mainly due to its system of Protective laws, I urge that Germany has now reached that

There were some eggs and a jug on the floor when the snake crawled into the house, and it swallowed one of the eggs, and as the jug was only on its side, had crawled through the handle as far as the egg be had swallowed would admit, and, finding another egg convenient as he crawled through the handle of the jug, swallowed that egg also, and as the egg was too large to pass through the handle of the jug, Mr. Snake was fastened so be could neither move backward or forward, there being an egg inside of him on either side of the jug bandle .- Kansas City Times.

A Remarkable Colt.

The Westfield Free Press is to be held accountable for this remarkable of story about a colt owned by Mr. Ruwas tied to the wall upon which were hung about fifty finished horse shoes, and the colt at once began sorting out a shoe for each foot __ took them down with its teeth and placed them to each of its four feet, and then paid no more attention to the shoes banging in front of it. The peculiarity of this is that every one of the shoes just fitted the colt's feet and were securely fastened to them.
