207 Remain.

We add this week fourteen names of the old voters of 1840 in the county list. This now makes 207 men yet living in the county who voted for Gen'l William H. Harrison in 1849. and who intend to vote for Gen'i Benjamin Harrison now in 1888. We believe we have succeeded in gathering up about all that yet re-There are, no doubt, a few we have not learned of While the matter in one sense was of but little general importance, yet the result is suggestive of several thoughts.

In the first place, there were, as we started, 2,100 even votes cast in the county in 1840 for the first Harrison. But about 200 of them remain. This tells us that near 1,900 are dead and gone. This is a large per cent of the 2100 that have passed away. True this was 48 years agonear half a century-but it impresses all with the flight of time and the great changes in our county between now and then.

In the second place, this Presidentisl campaign has recalled and reviy. ed all the memories and incidents of that of 48 years ago. This arises mainly from the fact that the name of the Republican candidate now is the same as that of the candidate in 1840, besides being his graudson bistory never before occurring.

I had great difficulity in convincing western farmers that we in Penn'a. did cut good clover and good timothy. "Maybe, I wasn't there then, but now they stop to feast," I of Pittsburg, were the guests of Mr replied You see, I knew that a farmer in Butler county had taken 160 bushels of corn off an acre, and that other farmers often had more than 100 bushels per acre; and knowing that, I was able to speak right out for our glorious old county, and to make my auditors think that maybe, after all, farmers could get along about as easily there as in the West. So it seemed then, so it seems now. I think a farmer makes a mistake who sells a good farm in Butler county and comes West to better his lot. Ten acres of good corn there is worth more than twenty acres of good corn in Iowa, and so with oats, and hay. Think of selling a double bushel of days last week. Glad to see you, corn for twenty cents, or a bushel of Male. oats for fifteen cents, or a ton of hay delivered, baled, at the depot, for four dollars or four and a half. And yet
