Brown Sugar.

People who eat brown sugar probably do not know they are eating an insect very nuch resembling a louse. Dr. C. Q. Jackson of Pittsburg, has been analyzing brown ugar, and says that out of fourteen sam oles of brown sugar examined for impuries, he gives the following result: Fragments of cane found in 14 sam-

Bacteria found in 14 samples. Insects found in 13 samples Glucose in adulterative quantities

Arsenic found in 1 sample Foreign mineral matters found in 14 sam-

Starch found in 1 sample.

Sand found in 0 sample. Whiting found in 0 sample. The insect spoken of is represented as rmidable monster, when highly magnifi ed. It is very small, and to the naked ve only a mere speck under the most fav-

Its body is oval and from its under surface eight legs project, each of them being armed at its extremity with a formidable a hook. Any one who has a microscop can find them in almost any sample rown sugar by dissolving a teaspoonful of the sugar in tepid water in a large wine glass and allowing it to settle for an hour r two. Then, if the sediment or the mat ter floating on the surface of the solution be examined under a microscope (a pocket lens is not quite enough) the mites may be seen squirming in a confused mass of or anic and mineral filth.
