Teach the Elements of Morals.

Seldom has a public utterance of a clergyman met with so hearty and general a response as Dr. Howard Crosby's Presbyterian Union speech of last week against the teaching of any sectanian or theological religion in the public schools. There resides in the State no right to tax a Hebrew, a Mohammedan or an agnostic for the support of schools in which even the upport of schools in which even the lines to deliver messages in typewriting, taught, and to impose such a tax would suggest, first a division of the proceeds among religious sects, and the end of all should be taught even in the primary schools, instead of being at the top of the course, to which but few public Speaker of the House, and in this moveschool pupils attain.-N. The liquor business as it stands to-day is a curse to the Nation, and the Internal Revenue is its foundation. An effort should be made immediately to repeal the law, and any Republican voting against it should be made immediately to repeal the law, and any Republican voting against it should be blacklisted, for it should be takenen for granted that he has Guckenheimer or Lorillard money in his pocket.
