THE authorities of Akron. Ohio, are ex periencing considerable difficulty in ennew law compelling attendance at school. A queer condition of affairs has been brought to light by the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of Joseph K. Sanders upon a charge of violating the above law. Sanders belongs to peculiar religious sect similar to, but identical with, the Second Adventists, and believing that the world is coming to across the Hassayampa River forty people an end very shortly. He therefore holds that it is useless to waste time upon worldly matters and although he has five children of school age they are not attending school, in consequence of this religious belief. There is considerable discussion among members of the bar as to whether the above facts constitute a ground for ac not to interfere with religious affairs.

The other day an excursion party of Bostonese wer landed in Washington with the smell of salt codfish, baked beans and stewed pumpkin exhaling from their wearing apparel. They went to the White House in a body, and then an explosion occurred. The President was in Pittsburg. The excursionists were furiously irate. They declared that the railroad agent who arranged the excursion had guaranteed them an opportunity to shake hands with the President. They got the "cold shake" instead of a handshake. This little extra excursion inducement of throwing in a handshake with the President with each reduced rate ticket is quite up to the Chicago mark, but a little startling for Boston.

Astor Family Jealousies.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 .- Everybody is mmenting on the fact that Mrs. William Astor left for Europe several hours after er brother-in-law's death and was wholly ignorant of his passing away. No amoun of explanation will ever satisfactorily explain away the fact that his critical condition and his death were not announced to her, although she lived within a hundred feet of him, and although the people in the house of the dead man knew that she was on the point of sailing for Europe. The failure to make such an announ ment confirmed of course the stories that a
