We do not believe there is any such purpose. Leaders, and those in influential party position, will have their preferences, doubtless, but these will be accepted by the party as they are wise or rejected as they are unwise.

There are several announced candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, and until recently very little interest was manifested in the drift of the canvass. Within the past few days that has changed. The whole field is now under review, and this is the time for it. "Senator Delamater owes it not merely to himself, but to the Republican party, whose candidate for the great office of Governor he expects to be, to meet these charges fully and completely and so strangle them that there shall never again be a chance for anybody either inside or out side the party to use them. This is due the Republican people, who are now in possession of but one side of the story, and who may wrongly construe absolute silence. Delay or failure to make convincing answer cannot but prove unfortunate.

"Gentleman, I am for Hastings, and as I have pledged myself to the Mayor, I will do all I can to elect Hastings delegates."

This is the first serious break in the Quay ranks, and when Senator Delamater was subsequently informed of Porter having turned in with the Mayor he said:

"I will win without Philadelphia."

But nevertheless Delamater was as much annoyed as Quay at Potter's defection.

The situation now looks as if Hastings will get from 25 to 30 delegates out of the 39 to which Philadelphia is entitled, and perhaps more.

Senator Quay felt confident last night that he would succeed in pulling the Mayor away from Hastings, but he missed it. He found Fither a more stubborn man than he calculated and he lost.

There is no doubt now that the Mayor will order a fight all along the line.
