WILLIAM ALAND, ARTISTIC CUTTER, TAILOR, 30 S. MAIN ST., BUTLER, PA.

A Plain Statement.

Now that the Holiday rush is over we are ready for the buyer who has a house or room to furnish and wants a large and new stock, experienced salesmen and low prices to select from.

We haven't a piece of furniture in the store that's been in stock over two months, and we haven't a piece that we would be ashamed to offer at our prices in any city in the land.

Our cheaper goods are well selected, and the very best for the money that can be gotten anywhere. Mark this.

There are many who have not yet been through our stores. We want you all to look in. It does not matter one bit whether you are buying or not, a look through our store is an advertisement of us, and we pay big money to the newspapers every year for worse ones.

Why there's no advertisement like an inspection of our stock. Your eye is the best salesman we want.

"Some lives are like" Horse shoes the more worn—the brighter Busy wives who use SAPOLIO never seem to grow old. Try a cake.

A complete course of domestic happiness has often resulted from badly washed dishes, from an unclean kitchen, or from trifles which seemed light as air.

But by these things a man often judges of his wife's devotion to her family, and charges her with general neglect when he finds her careless in these particulars.

Many a home owes a large part of its thrifty neatness and its consequent happiness to SAPOLIO.

As Grocers often substitute cheaper goods for SAPOLIO, to make a better profit, send back such articles, and insist on having just what you ordered.

A Fearful Fint.

Although man's path through life's bright With many a curious kind of dirt, For coquetry prodigions.

Of all the horde that devastates Our hearts, the worst one down to date's The flirt who is religious.

She looks so sweetly innocent, As one on heavenly things intent; You never dream that she'll hurt you; But beware she'll stab you at every To sight about your soul and his!

And sets out to convert you! Plain facts, of course, you're bound to think; Of course you'll never stop to think How queer 'tis that will dozens Of them around, she never wags To save your uncles or your aunts, Or else your giddy consorts.

For women's souls she never pines; A case for them she never knows; 'Tis passing strange that when folks Of her own sex go through storms With them with a cold disdain, yet burns To save the souls of men folks.

Yet, think not, though she looks so like A saint, that she can never strike A man a blow that's cruel; For, to foot the fall fire Of vanity she never tires, 'Tis thoughts hearts may furnish fuel.

She'll lead you on until you stop The question. Then my lady! stop You with a chill neglect; Of love, she'll vow she never thought! O, no, indeed! She's only saying "You're precious soul's salvation!"

TOM'S MONEY.

Mrs. Laughton had found what she had been looking for all her life—the man under the bed.

Every night of her nearly thirty years of existence this pretty little person had looked for him, and she had prayed, and had investigated the space beneath her bed, a light brass affair, hung with a chintz valance; had been peered beneath the dark recess of the dressing case, and having looked in the deep drawer of the bureau and into the chest, she fastened her door and felt as secure as a small in a shell.

As she never, in his particular business, seemed to have any confidence in Mr. Laughton, in spite of the fact that she admired and adored him, neither his presence nor his absence ever made any variation in the performance. She had gone through the motions, however, for so long a time that they had come to be in a manner perfunctory, and the start she received on this night of which I speak made her see it as she had never seen it before.

What was she to do? She, a coward par excellence, known to be the most timorous of the whole family, her tremors at all sorts of imagined dangers affording laughter to the flock of sisters and brothers, how could she stay on her knees after having seen that dark shape, as if going on by her prayers, while revolving some plan of procedure? That was out of the question. Scream? She couldn't have screamed to her life. Run? She could not more than have set one foot before the other than if her body had melted from the waist down. She was deadly faint and cold and shaking all over, and all in a second, in the fraction of a second, before she had risen from her stooping posture.

Oh! it wasn't that! Virginia instead of she! Virginia had always had such heroic plans of making the man come out of his hiding place at the point of her pistol; and could cock a pistol, and wasn't covered with cold shivers at the sight of one, as she was. If it had not been for the fact that she had set one foot before the other than if her body had melted from the waist down, she was deadly faint and cold and shaking all over, and all in a second, in the fraction of a second, before she had risen from her stooping posture.
