Rudini was made public yesterday morning. He goes over the indemnity matter and says the justice of such a claim is yet to be settled, quotes Webster's position in 1851 regarding a mob that attacked the office of the Spanish consul in New Orleans, quotes from the treaties and says of the office of Politz, one of the confession o

ends as follows:

If, therefore, it should appear that among those killed by the mob at New Orleans, has been made public. He says that at a meting of the Mafia society, ten names there were some Italian subjects who were resident or domiciled in that city, agreeably to our treaty with Italy, and not in violation of our immigration laws, and who were abiding in the peace of the United States and obeying the laws thereof and of the State of Louisians, and that the public officers charged with the duty of protecting life and property in that city connived at the work of the mob, or, upon proper notice or information of the threatened danger, failed to take any steps for the preservation of the public peace, and afterwards to bring the guilty to trial, the President would, under such circumstances, seel that a case was established that should be submitted to the consideration of Congress with a view to the relief of the families of the Italian subjects who had lost their lives by lawless violence.

Accept, sir, the renewed assurance of my high consideration.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

The reply is considered an able one, and not likely to aid Rudini in his local politics.

Italians who was lynched at New Orleans, has been made public. He says that at a meeting of the Mafia society, ten names were drawn from a wheel and the men so drawn were ordered to "do" the chief of Police, that the arms were carried in a bag to a certain shop where the men also met; that a boy watched for the chief and gave the men notice of his coming, and that they them stepped out of the shop and shot him.

Now that some of our schools have closed and the others are drawing near to completion, the question naturally arises in the minds of all those who are interested, viz: Has the means adopted justified the ends accomplished or in other words, Have the increased wages paid to our teachers the past season been beneficial to our pupils, and to our citizens at large? Have the "imported" and so-called "low-grade-certificate" teachers, proved themselves worthy of their calling; and have our directors been paid for their courage and perseverance in calling some of their teachers from abroad? Our answer is in the affirmative. In the first place, so far as our observation and knowledge extends, the new teachers have given entire satisfaction to both pupils and parents. They

In sections where it is likely to be dry in midsummer we should advise sowing alone on stubble ground early in the spring, and then keep weeds moved down two or three times during the season. This will prevent at any time a dense shade, and also furnish a mulch for the young plants. Then there will be no woody, coarse weeds to rake up with the crop the next year. For one of the best paying crops, simply as a crop, and for the drawing in and retaining of valuable element of the soil, sow clover.—J. M. Rice, in Prairie Farmer.

THE BUCKWHEAT CROP.

To Increase Fertility It Is Almost as Good as Clover. Clover is considered one of the best, if not the best crop that can be used to build up a run-down soil. But in some cases the land has been cropped down so much that a good growth of clover cannot be readily secured, and when this is the case something else must be used. In the absence of clover one of the best crops to use is buckwheat. It will grow in a soil too poor to make a will grow in a soil too poor to make a good crop of clover; it makes a quick growth and will soon shade the soil thoroughly. Shading the soil aids in nitrification and also in destroying the thoroughly. Shading the soil aids in nitrification and also in destroying the weeds. One advantage with buckwheat is that two good crops can be grown and turned under in one season and a sufficient quantity of plant food secured in this way to grow a crop of clover, and a soil that will grow clover can be built up into a good condition of fertility.

As soon as a good growth has been made, or when in full bloom, it will pay to plow under, taking pains to cover as completely as possible. as the first is plowed under, and before a hard frost in the fall it will have made a good growth. In this way a considerable quantity of valuable for-tilizer can be applied at a comparatively small cost and a good start be made small cost and a good start be made towards building up the fertility. Like clover, buckwheat will help to make the soil looser and more friable and to make plant food already in the soil available, as well as to add to the support of the support ply of fertilizing material. Its quick growth and its branching habit of growth make it a desirable crop to grow for a green manure, and as it will grow on very thin land it will be found a good crop to use for this purpose, es-pecially in the spring.—St. Louis Re-

Fertilization of Plants. Bees serve as active agents in the fer-tilization of plants, and are not destructhization or plants, and are not destructive in the least degree, says a writer. They are profitable, because they gather and store up that which would be entirely lost without their aid. They work in places that are rarely seen, and the fence corners and neglected spots are often valuable pasture fields for them. Though regarded as resentful in nature, yet they can be cared for easily, for, like animals, they are conquered by
