READ AND REMEMBER I. W. FINCH,

A SAGACIOUS BABOON.

low His Master Utilized the Beast at All Hours of the Day. Hours of the Day.

An extraordinary instance of sagacity and docility in a South African tamed ape, or baboon, represented in the illustration, from a photograph of the actual incident, has constantly been witpessed at Uitenhage, on the Cape Colony government railway to Port Elizabeth, South Africa. It is related in the following account by Mr. J. M. Thornton, of Sandilli House, Uitenhage, superintending engineer of the railway: "The ape, or monkey, or baboon to which reference is made, was the property of signalman employed on the railway, over him. The signalman's cabin adover him. The signalimans cann adjoins the railway workshops, of which I am the superintending engineer; so that I had many opportunities of seeing the part the monkey played in connection with the working of the signals. This baboon was about the size of an average child nine or ten years of age. To raise or lower the signals it placed its hind feet on the bottom of the lever. and with its fore paws seized the handle; then, by repeated jerks, caused the lever to move over. There are six levers, working signals which control trains proceeding in four different directrains proceeding in four different dries tions. The signalman had trained this animal so well that it knew which lever to pull over when it heard the sound of the whistle of the engine of an approaching train. The ape sometimes made mistakes, but I believe out of pyre mischief, to aggravate its master, who for each offense administered a severe castigation. There is no doubt that he governed this beast with a rod of iron, and taught it to obey him more from fear than from love or attachment."

THE MONKEY SIGNALMAN.
