The first conference between the Republicans of Butler and Lawrence counties regarding the Judicial nomination, took place at the Leslie House in New Castle, Tuesday, Jan. 10, 1892.

Free Silver in the Senate

The United States Senate passed a free-silver coinage bill as unqualified, and relieved every objection as it is possible for language to make it. Even the proviso that foreign silver coins should not be brought here and dumped into our mints, was stricken out.

THE HOMESTEAD AFFAIR.

Homestead, Pa., a town of 12,000 inhabitants, is situated on the Allegheny river, about 10 miles above Pittsburgh. The scene, last week, of a terrible and bloody encounter between organized labor and the immense capital of the Carnegie Company.

The Homestead Affair

The facts which led to this conflict seem to be as follows: The wage agreement between the firm and the Amalgamated Association expired on July 1st. By it the wages paid were fixed on a sliding scale, based on the market price of iron and steel.

The Homestead Affair

Under the old scale $25 was fixed as the minimum price for steel, that is, while the price continued as high as it pleased and the workers wages along with it, when it went below $25 per ton the scale was not affected but remained as if steel were worth $25. Frick asked to have it changed to $22.

The Homestead Affair

The main point of difference was the date of expiration of the sliding scale. It has heretofore expired on June 30. Frick wished to have it expire on Dec. 31. This is the main point of difference. It really means whether in case of trouble the expiration of scale the workmen will be obliged to fight in or will be antagonized by winter's cold as well as Frick.

The Homestead Affair

On this point both sides are firm. On July 1st, no agreement having been reached, Frick declared the works closed. The strikers, however, refused to do so, and the town of Homestead and control of the town of Homestead and its business, and was ordered to leave if he could not give a good reason for his presence.

The Homestead Affair

Mr. Frick appealed to the Sheriff on Tuesday and Deputy Sheriff C. G. Miller attempted to take possession of the works on that day, and took the afternoon train for the seat of trouble.

The Homestead Affair

As soon as the train was brought to a standstill the deputies stepped down, and forming a compact body, headed by C. G. Miller, started toward the gate, which stood several hundred yards from the mill. A loud shout was heard as the heavy breathing of the strikers and the grating of the pulleys beneath the heels of the advancing deputies. They came within a few feet of the determined strikers, who looked them square in the face without flinch or showing a flick from their position on top of the bank, while skilled marksmen were placed at every sheltered point and with their long-range rifles proceeded to shoot down every Pinkerton they could see.

The Homestead Affair

Though there were fewer rifle shots during the afternoon, and no one was killed by the Pinkertons, it was scarcely a less exciting time than the morning. The exciting time of the morning, the yards of the works and the river bank increased, and the great excitement prevailed and the universal demand was revenge for the death of the men slain during the morning. The universal demand was revenge for the death of the men slain during the morning.

The Homestead Affair

It was safe to walk through the yards at that hour, for the men in the barges had ceased to shoot, and if a Pinkerton man prays they were probably covered in the bottoms of their craft, invoking divine assistance to deliver them from what seemed like a most certain and most horrible death.

The Homestead Affair

On the right bank of the river above them was a cannon bank and the merrily rattled iron roofs of the barges which alone protected them from the shells of the cannon were planted on the bank. The side of the river and seemed the more powerful, for the shells of the cannon were planted on the bank. The side of the river and seemed the more powerful, for the shells of the cannon were planted on the bank.

The Homestead Affair

Up to this time there had not been a sign of life in the barges, but when within 50 feet of the shore the large doors at the end of the boats were thrown open and as many men as could conveniently stand on the little forward decks crowded quickly out.

The Homestead Affair

Through the rapidly coming daylight the men on the bank recognized the slouch-hatted, blue-coated, heavily-armed Pinkerton men. Every one of the Pinkertons held in his hands one of the deadly Winchester rifles, and through three scores of the glittering barrels were leveled directly at the mill men as the boat neared the land, not a man retreated, but rather pressed closer to the shore in order to be the first to fall if necessary. The din was terrific as the lusty-lunged mill men yelled at their rage upon the intruders. "Don't come on land or we'll brain you, you dirty black guards!" they yelled. "Why don't you work for your living like decent men?"

The People's Party.

R. S. Scott, Chairman of the Iowa State Committee of the People's Party, would stand as the candidate of the People's Party, and received an answer as follows: I stand by my interview of a few days ago on this subject. My name will not be presented to the Omaha convention.

The People's Party

Among the leading propositions of the platform are Government ownership of the railroads and telegraphs, Government franchises for farm products, Government loans of legal tender issues on farm mortgages, and confiscation of the lands of corporations that have too much real estate in the estimation of these regenerators of human society.

The People's Party

At Cincinnati, on the 20th ult, John Bitwell, a wealthy land owner of California was nominated for President by the Prohibition Convention, he receiving 500 votes on first ballot, Stewart 179 and Democrat 139.

The People's Party

The free-coinage plank was stricken from the platform, as was also a plank looking toward a fusion with other parties. The next day, the 1st inst, Dr. J. B. Cranfill of Texas was nominated for Vice President.

The People's Party

At New Castle, on the 1st inst, the Conference of the Mercer Lawrence Senatorial district nominated J. S. Fruit of Mercer Co. for State Senate.

The People's Party

Free coinage was defeated in the House at Washington, Wednesday, by a vote of 154 to 139.
