If we should repeat hour foreign wool, He for eign wool-grower would increase his flocks instantly, and the increased in price since the passage of the McKinley bill. Every farmer knows that such is the case all over the West. Wool has been low, but not so low as it is abroad. The protective tariff on wool is intended simply to protect our farmers against the cheaper wool of outsiders. It is doing that the service. Now here was Sally Ann Bradley, 70 years of age, poor, and Irs. Mary A. Criner and son John of llertown, Allegheny Co., were the guest Robert Anderson last Sunday.

Now wool has declined in price since the passage of the McKinley bil, not alone in the United States, but also in England, in South America, in Australia, and everywhere else on the face of the earth. All the tariff can do in such a case is to keep the price of our domestic wool higher in this country than the price of foreign wool abroad. This it does do. If this Greene Coanty Democrat will examine the price of wool, he will find that, while |e received 27 cents a pound last year for his wool, the same grade of wool in Canada and in London brought only from 17 to 18 cents a pound. Now, what the tariff on wool did for the American farmer was to prevent a still further reduction. Had it not been for the McKinley bill he would not have received even 27 cents for his wool, and he would have been compelled to put it on the market here in this coun-Now wool has declined in price since the put it on the market here in this stands the fact that the object of a protective tariff is to keep the markets of this country for our own producers, and to protect home labor against the cheaper labor of the Old World. Of course, whenever we by overproduction cheapen goods in the United States, the reaction on the markets have determined by the reaction of the rest of

we by overproduction cheapen goods in the United States, the reaction on the markets abroad cheapens them also for the rest of the world. When we drove down the price of steel rails in this country, the price was driven down also in England. When we produced cheaper cotton goods in the United States, they became cheaper abroad. We are now commencing in this country to manufacture tin-plate for the people of the United States. We shall drive the price of that article down here in this country inside of the next twelve months, and the price will also be driven down in Wales. The protective tariff does not aim to keep the price of any article up to a given point; it aims simply to enable our own people to make and produce articles the country needs and pay a high price for labor, as against people who produce them with cheap labor in the world abroad. Wool is no exception to this rule. Just so long as the farmers of this country can realize 8 or 10 cents a pound more for their wool than the foreign producers of wool can realize in our markets, our people will continue to grow sheep, improve their flocks, increase the size of their fleeces, and to build up that growing industry.

Some of these veto messages are couched in coarse and cruel language, unbecoming the dignity of the Chief Executive of this Great Nation. These private pension bills were passed by Congress to give relief in worthy and meritorious cases which did not come under the general pension law then in force.

"Generally, administrations in a Presidential election are challenged on account of the condition of the business of the country, and I submit that the Republican Administration of President Harrison can triumphantly endure such a test. I doubt if, since the Government of United States was instituted anybody at any time has riumphantly endominent of United if, since the Government of United was instituted, anybody at any time has seen what we call "good times" so generally, taking in so many interests and spreading prosperity throughout the whole domain of trade. "The opponents of the Regulation party always represent New York as a commercial city, and not a manufacturing one, and yet the product of the manufacturers of this city alone is $700,000,000. Anything in that would cripple that great industry would cripple the metropolis seriously and to a very hurtful extent. More men in New York get their living from pursuits protected by the tariff than from any other source. I know New York is the centre of our commerce, the great entrepot of our trade; but all the men engaged in commercial affairs in and about New York are smaller in number than the men engaged in manufactures. Nor if you go West, where the Democrats this year are making considerable effort, and doing a vast amount of boasting, will you find it different. Take Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, or Illinois and the products of manufactories are greater in pecuniary amount than the products of agriculture in these four great agricultural States.
