from the nature of the instrument, but the lessee has been careful to make no express promise to operate the lease, or to do anything towards the development of the land If he does nothing, the penalty for his inaction is fixed. It is the forfeiture or loss of his rights under the agreement. But, if he thinks it an object to do so, he may prevent the assertion of this forfeiture by paying $100 in advance of the 1st day of the next month after the date of the contract, and upon such payment, the right of forfeiture is postponed one month. This he may do month after month as long as he pleases, or until the end of five years. If, however, he puts down no well during the first month, and pays no money in lieu of it, his rights are at an end, and the lessor may assert the forfeiture. This looks like an improvident agreement, and, as the learned judge of the court below suggests, may have been obtained by artifice; but no frand is alleged, and the question is therefore one of construction only. Its legal effect is to confer on the grantee the right to explore for oil on the tract described If he does not exercise this right within one month, it is lost to him, unless he chooses to pay $100 in advance as the price of another month's opportunity to explore. says:

of another month's opportunity to explore. If he does exercise it, and finds nothing, he is ander no obligation to continue his explorations. If he explores, and finds oil or gas, the relation of landlord and tenant rovendor and vendee is established, and the tenant would be under an implied obligation to operate for the common good of both parties, and pay the rent or royalty reserved. In this case, he did nothing in the way of development, and, after the payment of $100 per month for the delay for a short time, he ceased to pay. The appellant contends that becarso he might pay under the terms of the contract he may he compelled to pay; but payment was the means provided by the contract by which the exercise of the right of the lessor to assert a forleiture could be postponed. If the lessee did not wish to postpone the exercise of such right, he had only to refrain from making the payment. This case is not ruled by Ray v. Gas Co., 138 Pa. St. 576, 20 Atl.
