LOCAL AND GENERAL

Bookworms. The highest price paid for bookworms at the mill of Geo. W. Fisher & Son, Butler, Pa.

A great crop of ice was harvested last week and this. Large sized photographs are the latest craze.

Skates are full goods, if you don't know how! Don't you want the CITIZEN and N. Y. Tribune, this year, for $1.50.

The chappies now consider it bad form to turn up their pants when it rains. Did you ever hear of a person who made a good New Year resolution and kept it?

Some of the railroad conductors now call out "Don't forget your hand baggage," when the train stops.

1892 with its Homestead riot, its cholera scare, and its ta-ra-boom-de-aye, has passed into history.

A. H. Reiber are already having plans for their proposed new building on Main St.

When a person considers himself as "one of a thousand" he naturally regards the others as cypers.

The proposition of base ball people to enlarge the diamond will put the hotel clerk on his mettle.

The new year started out somewhat chilly for the people of Harmony and Zellenhope whose supply of gas short.

One or two of the U. S. Senators are in favor of the members of the Senate wearing gowns.

Mr. J. H. Morrison shipped 2700 barrels of bookworm, this winter, from Harrisville to Butler.

Notwithstanding the fact that hundreds of sleighs were brought to Butler for this winter there is a scarcity of them here now.

In making up your resolutions for the New Year, don't forget that one of the best things to do is to secure your subscription to THE CITIZEN.

The State Senate of South Carolina has passed a bill providing for the dispensing of all liquors by officers of the State and doing away with the licensing system.

Hereafter the Jarecki will do the oil well supply business in Butler, and the Supply Co. in Harmony. The two companies have divided the oil territory.

The mercury was five degrees below zero Monday morning. It was somewhat foggy in Butler that morning, and down at Harrisburg it was so dark that some of the street cars burned their headlights all day, and the Sun appeared as you see it through a smoked glass.

A couple of Indiana Pa. citizens, reputable men and supposed to be as sharp as they make them and always up to snuff, were taken in by the "green goods" swindle, the time of the weather. There are green people in the town as well as the country.

While D. W. Forrester of Franklin township was tearing down the chimney of an old house a few days ago he found a copper half cent piece, dated 1805. They are entirely out of circulation now.

The Good People of Chicago are being robbed right and left, in their homes, on the sidewalks and in the street cars, by burglars, footpads, roadgrabs and several other varieties of highwaymen, mounted and unmounted.

The open air concert given by the orchestra of the Decker Bros. Minstrel Troupe, on the Diamond Saturday evening was a very large crowd to assemble around them, considering the weather. Their music was excellent, and so also was the entertainment that followed.

The plate glass business of this country is already overdone, and the manufacturers have entered into a combination to curtail the production. It is said that plate glass cannot profitably be produced cheaper than the present rates.

At a congressional meeting of the English Leather check of this place last Sunday it was decided to sell the lot of church ovens on corner of Centre and Zeigler avenues, southside, it is said to be valuable property.

Messrs Contler & Baker, two of our most capable and active young attorneys have removed their office to room "B" on the second floor of the Army and Navy Building. Mr. Baker is in charge of the new Gas Co. and also of the Town Council, and the firm needed more commodious quarters.

Before Paderewski, the pianist, had set foot in New York on his new tour, the advance sale of seats for his season amounted to $40,000. It is truly the great piano slinger of modern times.

The annex to the Cambria County Jail—immediately in the rear of the main building—is completed. It is intended exclusively for female prisoners. The structure is of stone and brick, thirty by thirty-two feet, two stories in height. The basement story contains a forty-horse-power boiler, locomotive pattern, from which the entire jail is heated; coal bins, and a dungson. The latter is a receptacle four by six feet on the inside, walls of brick two feet thick, laid in cement, solid iron door and four two-inch air flues. Dangerous and unruly prisoners will be confined in this place until they are fanned.

On the second floor there is a steel cage, disconnected from the ceiling and a narrow corridor between it and the side and the end walls. The cage is divided into six cells, eight by eleven feet, with graded concrete. There are two folding beds in each water closet, and each bed is with cold water. Electric bells connect each cell with the Warden's office. The annex is connected with the main jail building by a covered passage way sixteen by five feet. The doors connecting with the main building will be kept locked so that no one but the warden, or those under his direction can pass to and fro. The entire jail building is lighted by electricity.—Ez.

The above is interesting from the fact that the addition of the same sort is needed to the jail of this county.

About three years ago a boy named Orville Moore was sent to the reform school at Morazona from Lawrence county. After the time expired the commissioners attempted to collect the bill for his maintenance from the school authorities of his home town, but they refused to pay the bill on the ground that young Moore had been sent to the reform school by the court, and therefore the county was liable, and not the township. Judge Martin last Friday denied the township's claim, in which the minor had a residence is responsible, and not the county.

Judge Fell, of Philadelphia, has decided against the Pennsylvania railroad company's application for a reversal of the verdict indemnifying a shipper over the loss of goods when the goods were lost in the joint town. The goods in dispute consisted of 10 barrels of whisky shipped from the Miller distillery at Keffelville, Westmoreland county, to Lang, Berneville & Co., of Philadelphia. It was shown that while the part of the freight was paid, the whisky was swept away by the water, the car in which it was loaded remained unharmed, but was destroyed by the mob of vagabonds seized the liquor and a committee of citizens was obliged to take the whisky and destroy it. The preservation of the community and preservation of order. As dispenses of the plaintiff's attorney, the plaintiff's attorney had the judge refused to interfere with the jury's verdict.

An interesting decision has been made in the Erie county courts in regard to the land tenure. The Pennsylvania road has been proceeding against some "squatters" on the Erie road and destroy it. The defendants claimed that she was the owner of the land by virtue of more than twenty-one years possession; the railroad claimed that she should recover her holding from the death of her husband, and that he had not held the property for twenty-one years, while she was not being a heir, could not continue the holding in an unbroken line. The court held that as partner of her deceased husband, the wife could continue in the line of her husband, and she had held the property for twenty-one years, and she was not being a heir, could not continue the holding in an unbroken line. The court held that as partner of her deceased husband, the wife could continue in the line of her husband, and she had held the property for twenty-one years, and she was not being a heir, could not continue the holding in an unbroken line.

On Tuesday of this week, the Supreme Court of the State now in session at Philadelphia, affirmed the decision of the Court of Allegheny Co., in convicting the Matthews of selling newspapers on Sunday, under the act of April 22, 1794. The decision of the court in this particular case which are not disputed, refers to the remarkable development of the publishing business, and ends as follows: "It is our plain duty to enforce the act of 1794 as we find it upon the statute books. While the Sunday newspaper may be a great convenience to a large portion, perhaps a large majority, of the people, it does not, in our opinion, come within the exception of the act of 1794. No one pretends that it is a charity, and we cannot say as a matter of course that it is necessary. It is a convenience, nothing more. We are of the opinion that the defendant is properly convicted, and we would regret to see it reversed. We must, however, be allowed to express the fear that too liberal an interpretation may create an antagonism that may lead to the repeal, or at least to a serious modification, here may be such a thing as excessive zeal in invoking its penalties in extreme cases. The act is in our opinion dangerous from its friends than its enemies."

Privileges of the New Gas Co.

The principal matter discussed at the meeting of Council Tuesday evening, was a resolution allowing the new gas company the privilege of entering and occupying the streets and alleys of the town, under the Gas ordinance of July 29, 1885, and the Paved streets ordinance of Sept. 19, 1891.

The resolution provides that the company shall enter into an agreement with the borough to subject themselves to the regulations and restrictions of the ordinances, and give bond in $5,000 to the town for all damages arising from their failure or neglect.

The ordinance of July 29, 1885 requires the pipes to be buried five feet under the ground, but as the oil company does not have its pipes that deep, it is understood that two feet will be an ample depth. Some of the members of the Council favored allowing the new company to run their pipes over the surface as the Independent line is doing, but that was strongly objected to on the grounds that the lines along the gutters. The Independent Co. was let in under a special ordinance passed in February of 1888, which, the present city solicitor says, is illegal and should not have been enacted.

The new company therefore will be required to bury their pipes deep enough to be below the drains and ditches of the town, and it will have the privilege of using all the streets and alleys, excepting the paved streets which must be crossed at right angles with ties of sufficient size to accommodate their pipes.

A special committee recommended changing the electric lights at Walter's Hill, and at the Company's houses in Springdale.

The Burgess reported receipts amounting to $78.50, which he paid over. Mr. Heisenauer wants the lot Ward Horse Co. to vacate his building on March 30th, and the committee was instructed to secure another location.

Bills aggregating $600 were approved and Council adjourned till next regular meeting.

Back in 1884, when oil was first struck in Washington county, prospectors leased the farm of Albert Smith. It was decided to bore a well in Smith's orchard. Smith objected because it would destroy a certain apple tree he had a particular fondness for. The lumber and other appliances were thrown over the fence, a distance of a few feet, and in about the usual time the George Cameron well was flowing at the rate of 100 barrels an hour. Smith saved his apple tree and came within the exception of the law which he had secured for himself.
