To a delegation who lately called upon him, lately, P. M. General Bissell defined his policy regarding the Presidential offi-

ns poncy regarding the Presidential officers as fo llows:

First—No former Democrat postmaster of any class need expect so be reappointed now, unless there is some unusual reason governing his case, as for instance that he is the only candidate or his rivals are persons not worthy of the appointment or without the ability to manage the office.

Sgc'os—In the case of Republican presidential postmasters they will be permitted to serve out a term of four years from the date of their appointment unless serious charges are sustained against them. [It will be noted by this paragraph that it. Bissell fixes the term of four years as commencing with the date of the appointment, and not with date of confirmation. This will make quite a difference in the terms of some of the incumbents, as there are instances where confirmation did not take place for a year after the postmaster took charge of the office, and if he were permitted to serve four years after confirmation be would in reality be serving five years.]

mation he would in resulty be serving live years.]

Third—All postmasters of the presidential class and of the higher grade of the fourth class will be required to conduct their offices themselves, and in no instance will they be permitted to manage other businers. [Mr. Bissell believes that the practice of permitting pestmasters to farm out their offices by hiring clerks to run them should be broken up. If an applicant cannot devote himself to the duties of the office he will not be appointed. These fourth-class offices that will come under this ruling are those where the compensation ranges from $50 per month, upwards.]

The first article in the North American ew for March is on "American Farm ing a Hundred Years Hence." It is con-tributed by Hon. Jeremiah M. Rusk, Secetary of Agriculture during President Har ison's administration. Though it occupies only eight pages it contains much food for thoughtful consideration and we believe every intelligent farmer would wade Hampton also had lengthy interviews with the President. During the day read it with interest and profit.

is from his recollections of farm life, covering a period of over forty years, that he gathered "material upon which to predi-cate some of the changed conditions which will attend the growth of our country during the next century." After referring briefly to the days of the flail and the old ashioned plow, he divides the changes that have taken place into four classes: (1.) Extent and character of our population.
(2.) Methods of farming. (3.) Our trade relations, both interstate and internation al. (4.) The conditions of rural life. In relations, both interstate and international. (4.) The conditions of rural life. In the past fifty years our population increased from 17,000,000 to 62,000,000, while "the age of steam and electricity" and the opportunities for the rapid accumulation of wealth, have "drawn from the healthful, peaceful and reasonably prosperous occupation of agriculture many of the brainiest of our young Americans," whose "places have been largely taken by foreigners." This change in the character of the agricultural population Secretary Rusk thinks will be less marked in the future. On this subject he says:

Should our population increase as rapidly during the coming hundred years as in the past fifty, it will not be less than four hundred millions. I am, however, inclined to think it will not so increase, for one thing, we will not have the same inducements to offer to immigrants. When the ments to offer to immigrants. farming, except on the smallest scale, and truck farms n-ar cities bring a high rent and call for the greatest intelligence as well as industry on the part of the farmer—one of the chief inducements to foreigners seeking our shores, namely, the aquisition of farms of their own, will disappear. At the same time the liberal tendencies of all civilized countries, even under monarchial governments, will leasen the number of those who leave the older countries for the sake of greater political freedom. Immigration to the United States will consist more and more of a few comparatively well-to-do persons, seeking opportunities for the profitable investment of a small capital, and who possessing some educas tion and training in the art of self-government will readily amalgamate with our own people, or of the poorest classes well content to serve for a time in the ranks of labor provided the rate of wages is high the next capital, the next century he predicts that.

Inside the next century he predicts that every acre of land will be in the possession of private owners and will be taxed to supply the needs of our three or four hundred millions of acres now unproductive; "care and feeding will convert the now commonly accepted ratio of four acres to one cow into something more like four cows to one acre;" "science sided by necessity, will have solved the problems of feeding, so as to secure the maximum result for the minimum feed;" "waste products will be utilized in a hundred different ways not now dreamed of;" remedies will prevent the in-

In an admirable and pathetic response to addresses of welcome by the Governor of the State and Mayor of the city he said with simple honesty: "I left you with but one certainty, and I return rith that—the certainty that I had no other motive in my heart than the honor of the flag, the sacredness of the constitution and the prosperity of all our peo-

McCANDLESS—In this place, Tuesday morning, March 14, 1893, Hon. Charles McCandless, in the 59th year of his age.

The death of Mr. McCandless was a great shock to our people. He had gone from his house to his office as usual on Monday morning last and commenced looking over some legal papers in a case. But in a short time, about half after 9 o'clock, he was heard to call as if for help upon Mr. Kohler, who has an adjoining office. Upon Mr. Kohler entering the office he found Mr. Candless prostrated and as if stricken with paralysis. Physicians and help were called and it was found the whole lower part of his body was paralyzed.

Every effort was made to restore the Every effort was made to restore the parts affected to action but without avail. While evidently very sick and afflicted yet he was conscious. His strong will seemed to remain and he tried to aid himself in every way he could. In the afternoon he was removed to his house and for a time it seemed as if he might recover. Every appliance known to medical science was resorted to, but at about four o'clock of Tuesday morning death came.
