THE CITIZEN

BRUIN WENT THE PACE.

He Was Cross and Abrasive When in His Cups, But He Meant Well.

Big Jackson is dead, and as a result down beneath the weight of unutterable woe, Jackson was only a big, shaggy, black bear, but he was a hale fellow in his way, and there was not a man in all the Bohemian who could cope with him when it came to drinking whiskey, says the San Francisco Examiner.

He could drink from morning till night, go rolling in his bed in the corner of the yard, and get up in the morning fresh as ever. From his youth he was a drinker, and he was a drinker of the Bohemian in his makeup, and early in life he started to travel the pace that kills. His friends had forewarned him that that there could be but one end to it, and when Jackson shook the grim destroyer they shook their heads grimly and said with ominous accent: "You're done."

Sunstroke was the immediate cause of his death, but alcoholism accelerated it. The small head behind it all. Disipation had sapped the strength of a once robust constitution, and the other day came the end. Jackson was in his cups. During the forenoon he poured whiskey into his stomach in liberal quantities, and the consequence was that by noon he was very, very drunk. Then he became ugly and belligerent, as was his wont when drinking, and he was thrust out of the small bar behind it all.

When it was found that Jackson was dead, King McManus was sent for. He had been the latter's favorite for years, and it was to be expected that the monarch of Potrero should be given the opportunity to show the last honors to his old friend.

"Give him the best send-off you can, boys," was the king's admonition, "and don't spare any expense. Jackson was a thoroughbred, and he was a good fellow. Send the bill to me."

And so McManus' followers gathered in to attend the rites. Jackson was a man such as seldom comes along these days, and when it was all over the body of Jackson was laid to rest in a grave dug for him on the top of Irish Hill, overlooking the scene of many a jolly carousal. Nor was there any lack of mourners. Jackson had made a host of friends in his dissipated career, and they stood about the grave to do him such honor as they could.

"We planted him just like a human being," said one sympathizer, "and you shouldn't be so wretched to bear in the world, for he drank like a fish, and was often cross and abusive, but he meant well, and never played it low on a friend in need."

An Immense Bridge to Span the Mersey at Liverpool.

It is proposed to build an immense bridge over the Mersey to connect Liverpool with Birkenhead, and the designs of the structure are already in existence. According to descriptions in the Liverpool newspapers, the bridge will be of the arch suspension type, in three spans, the roadway being suspended from the arches by a series of cables.

The estimated cost of the bridge and its approaches, including a sufficient amount of property and land, is estimated at £1,200,000.

Color-Blind Cupid.

(Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.)

Since the day when the fair Desdemona of Salsaparilla's creation fell in love with Othello, the jealous Moor seems to have been the custom for white women to become enamored of colored men. In this city the custom extends to a startling degree, and the Freeman-Lawton tragedy just enacted records the latest of the last twenty years in the increase in this practice has been very marked.

In the various quarters of the city, such as Jones avenue, second avenue above Fry street, in many parts of the city, there are a number of white women who are married to colored men, and in the vicinity of the Black Diamond steel works, blacks and whites may be found mingled together at every turn.

In many cases of this character the black man and white woman are man and wife, and they seem to live happily together.

M. J. Dean, late superintendent of the Humane society, had met during his term of office many cases of this kind and he says that these same exist to-day.

There are quite a number of white women who are married to colored men in the hill district. One very handsome blonde is the wife of a barber. There is another family of colored people in this city whose father was a full-blooded white man.

"I know another instance where a white woman, who at present cleans offices on Grant street, has become infatuated with a negro natural attachment to her locality. She is a pure Caucasian, but I believe she is fast growing to look like her dusky lover."

"Then there is a case of a well-known business man of this city, whose wife was a white woman, who has become infatuated with a colored man of the Monongahela house. That created quite a sensation at the time and then the brother of the woman visited the hotel for the purpose of demanding satisfaction from the black brother-in-law at the point of a knife. A great many of these miscegenations have their origin in the large hotels. Here white domestics and scullery maids are thrown considerably into the company of colored waiters, cooks, porters, etc., and in that way natural attachments are formed. Only last week two girls were sent to Morgan on account of their shameful and disgraceful escapades with two negroes."

"In Allentown, thirty first ward, there are three families getting on in the world, the head of each is a black man, while the consorts are white."

"A visit to the colored churches on any Sunday will disclose a number of cases of where white women have taken to themselves dusky life partners, but only rarely can a case be discovered where white men have married colored women."

USE DANAN'S SAISAPARILLA FOR "THE KIND THAT CURES."

Persons in charge of traction engines on the roads should exercise great care when they meet teams. The law is very explicit as to the manner of using engines, while on the road, and the penalties provided for the violation of the provisions of the Act are very severe.

A pile weighing 22 pounds was taken from the Cusewago, at Meadville lately. It measured 43 inches in length and was caught with a bass rig.

Are ahead of them all, chiefly among them is the display of Danan's Saisaparilla, a product of the State. It is conceded that no other whistles made in the world can equal those of Danan's Saisaparilla.
