A Touching Tribute to Medical Heroism.

The following touching tribute to medical heroism is from the New York Sun. The Sun is always just to the medical profession, and in this instance speaks as it has often done from its heart.

HON. D. NEWLIN FELL.

Republican Candidate for Judge of Supreme Court.

A Scene in the House.

Mr. Aldrich, the Republican representative from Chicago, opened the debate on the election bill Monday morning with a vigorous defense of the Republican attempt to check the "Democratic frauds" in that great city and put down the alleged "Carter Harrison ring."

Then came Mr. Boutelle of Maine, against the measure, "Every Democratic speech," he said, "has demonstrated that this is a blow at the fundamental principles underlying this government."

Mr. Boutelle then went on to take up the records of the senate committee, beginning with the president pro tem, Mr. Henry, who stated that almost without exception they had served in the confederate army.

"I declare here now on my own responsibility as a representative that no more mischievous doctrines, no more deadly blow at our institutions, at the essence of our nationality, our country can be dealt than by the denial of the right of this important government to cross the border of a sovereign state." (Republican applause.)

"If such doctrines are to prevail, then the case for which I and 2,000,000 of my northern countrymen fought when the rebellion was put down, was not victorious." (Republican applause.)

"I want you to understand," he continued, "that when you rely on the dog-faces of Massachusetts and the ballot-box stuffers of Tammany hall you are leaning on a broken reed." (Applause.)

The house was listening eagerly. Suddenly Mr. Springer took exception against applying the epithet "dog-face" to a member of the house.

"It is an epithet," returned Mr. Boutelle defiantly, "which can be applied to any equal force as well as to the gentleman as the gentleman from Massachusetts."

The house held its breath. Mr. Springer's face grew white with rage.

"Do I understand you to say that you applied the epithet to me?" he shouted.

"You understand it as well as you are capable of understanding anything," retorted Boutelle.

"I want you to know sir," replied Mr. Springer, striding toward his adversary with fire in his eye, "that you dare not apply such an epithet to me as you have done to other members of this house."

"Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois can't be impertinent to me under the guise of a point of order," returned Mr. Boutelle. "But I withdraw the epithet," he continued, "moving his arms magnanimously to the right and left."

"I may go on with my speech," he declared, "but it is unparliamentary. The attempt to make it so is as silly as was the attempt in the last congress to take exception to the right of the Senate to elect a president."

Mr. Springer was evidently far from satisfied with the but, but he seated himself and Mr. Boutelle read the extract from the law.

Mr. Marshall of Virginia secured five minutes in which to reply to the attack of Mr. Boutelle.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Verdes on the death of Mrs. Fry, of Peterboro.

Clasp the pale fingers Above the white breast, Lay her down softly And leave her to rest.

Sweetly she slumbers For sickness is o'er, Friendship and love She needs no more.

Press on her forehead The last kiss of joy, Angels have welcomed Her spirit above.

Rev. W. M. Messers, the talented but erratic minister and orator, died at a hospital in Philadelphia last Sunday.

He was a native of this county, and some months ago, and a prolonged drunk took him to his grave.

J. W. Ladd, of Clintonville, an old employe of T. W. Phillips, died last Saturday.

He took charge of the quarantine station at Erie last year, during the cholera epidemic, and he had several cases in the Van derbilt clinic; he died in a hospital. Though he had but just turned thirty years of age, he was the author of works upon malaria, fevers, the cholera and other diseases; he was a member of the Erie Medical Society. We knew him personally, and we can testify that he was a high-minded gentleman.

October 4th was a rare day for G. F. Easley and wife, being their silver wedding. Showers in the morning cast a damper on the face of nature, but notwithstanding the gloom, the friends and neighbors banded to assemble at an early hour.

Mr. Easley, who had a crowd of numbers over a hundred the tables fairly groaned with the good things of life. After the feast an organization was effected by electing Capt. C. B. Gillespie, chairman of the meeting and W. J. McCollough, secretary.

Mr. Easley made the opening speech in which he congratulated the bride and groom upon their silver wedding, that they had been blessed with a son, and that they were surrounded by all the comforts of this life as well as by a dozen silver branches, and a number of other presents.

Mr. Easley followed, recalling many of the incidents of his life, and the many friends who had gathered about him, and the many friends who had gathered about him, and the many friends who had gathered about him.
